Saudi king frees 300 OFWs at GMA request

By Fe Zamora

RIYADH—PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-Arroyo flies home Wednesday night—early today in Manila—with a list of more than 300 Filipinos granted clemency by King Abdullah upon her request, Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas reported.

The first batch of freed prisoners comprising 52 women was due to depart Riyadh aboard a Gulfair flight at 10:40 p.m. [3:40 a.m. today Manila time] ahead of Ms Arroyo's entourage that was to fly back to the Philippines from nearby Dharan.

GMA takes direct control of Pagcor

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr.

PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-Arroyo has taken back direct control of the government's cash cows—the Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corp. (Pagcor) and the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office (PCSO).

The move was ostensibly made to ensure quick and sufficient funding for the President's multi-billion-peso social projects, such as mass housing, food subsidies,

FOR THREE PEOPLE SURVIVING on P50 a day in a squatter community in Manila, another mouth to feed ought to be the last thing on their minds.

But Salvacion "Sally" Ruiz, 58, and her two grown children did not hesitate to welcome Sandin Lee, a bouncing baby boy abandoned by his teenage mother in the family's 15-square-meter shanty in Vitas, Tondo.

Sally, a widow of eight years, was prepared to adopt the child even before he was born.

She had been yearning for a baby in the house because her own children—daughter Metilyn, 28, and son Salmie, 25—were always away at work.

It was also Sally's way of convincing the mother, then 18, to keep what was to be her second child.

The mother had wanted to abort the pregnancy, convinced that she was not up to the responsibility.

"But abortion is just wrong. Babies don't deserve to die," Sally said emphatically in Filipino in an interview yesterday with the INQUIRER.

Gov't sees fewer poor Filipinos in 2010

By Michelle V. Remo and Christian V. Esguerra

THE PHILIPPINES' ANNUAL population growth slowed down to a rate of 1.95 percent last year, prompting economic authorities to say that the deceleration would help make the country's poverty-reduction goal within reach.

Should this growth rate be sustained, the Philippines would have over 94 million people by 2010, the National Statistical Coordination Board (NSCB) reported yesterday.

The Philippine population growth rate stood at 2.1 percent from 2000 to 2004. As of last year, the population was estimated at 85.2 million.

Romulo Neri, director general of the National Economic and Development Authority, noted that the latest population growth rate was nearing the government's medium-term target of 1.94 percent.

Neri said slowing down population growth to 1.94 percent a year was necessary to enable the Philippine economy to feed and sustain its entire population.

Quake blacks out C. Visayas

A RELATIVELY MILD EARTHQUAKE YESTERDAY shook Leyte island, leaving several million people in Central Visayas without electricity for about seven hours, but seismologists said there were no immediate reports of other damage.

The quake, initially measured at magnitude 3.7, knocked down a transmission tower in Ormoc City, and three power plants on the island were shut down as a preventative measure, National Transmission Co. (Transco) president Alan Ortiz said.

No casualties were reported, the Office of Civil Defense in Manila said.

The shallow quake struck Leyte at 10:02 a.m., the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology said in an advisory.

The quake's epicenter was located 14 km northeast of Ormoc City, Phivolcs said. It JAILED MORO REBEL LEADER Nur Misuari and his spiritual adviser are to be housemates in a Quezon City house for the next 45 days, as a Makati court yesterday granted their petition to be placed under house arrest while undergoing medical treatment.

Misuari and Ustadz Abuharis Usman, who are charged with the nonbailable offense of rebellion for the bloody 2001 uprising in Jolo, have been allowed to stay at No. 27 6th Street, New Manila, according to the order issued by Makati Judge Sixto Marella Jr.

The judge said the two detainees would pay for their living expenses while under house arrest.

SC chief fears rise of greedy legal eagles

By Armand N. Nocum

THE WAY SOME LAWYERS ARE throwing legal ethics to the wind, they may just turn out to be worse than the moneyed criminals they are defending in court.

Chief Justice Artemio Panganiban voiced this apprehension as he noted that legal technicalities were being used to advance the interests not only of clients but also of the lawyers themselves at the expense of justice.

"Society has the most to fear from this crop of lawyers who have a wealth of legal knowledge but a threadbare ethical mooring; they may turn out to be worse than the criminal they defend," Panganiban said at the oath-taking ceremony for 1,526 new lawyers on Tuesday.

"In a society in constant flux such as ours, there is an ever-growing temptation to cut corners for easy solutions. Sadly, some lawyers have become merely adept at being legal technicians defending their client's causes," he said.

"They have lost sight of the fact that their duty, first and foremost, is to serve the ends of justice; and that their primary fidelity is to the courts

Foes find GMA guilty in 'trial'

By Norman Bordadora

PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-Arroyo has been found guilty of corruption and of electoral fraud in a mock trial conducted by civil and political groups opposed to her rule.

The month-long investigation and trial organized by the tribunal calling itself the Citizens' Congress for Truth and Accountability (CCTA) has no legal value but have helped to keep the heat on the President nearly a year after vote-rigging and corruption scandals emerged to rock her presidency.

The CCTA, which started its proceedings in late 2005, expectedly found Ms Arroyo guilty of electoral fraud, human rights violations and graft and corruption.

Former Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr., who chairs the CCTA fact-finding committee, said the group would send a complaint to the United Nations that he said could lead to the nullification of the 2004 elections and the holding of snap polls.

Complaint to UN

Guingona said a draft complaint would be filed before the UN Human Rights Committee under the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, requesting that the UN send to the country to verify the evidence of electoral fraud gathered by the CCTA.

The CCTA presented at a press conference a 203-page report recommending Ms Arroyo's resignation and the filing of charges against her.

The President has steadfastly refused to step down.

After hearing 22 witnesses and reviewing voluminous documents in five public hearings, the 15-member CCTA "presidium" found that Ms Arroyo allegedly cheated her way to the presidency by tampering election results in four vote-rich provinces.

More than P7 billion in state funds were allegedly used to fund government projects allegedly designed to lure large number of votes for Ms Arroyo in the 2004 presidential elections, the organizers said.

Guingona alleged the Arroyo camp may have stolen up to 1.2 million votes to ensure her victory.

Human rights violations

The CCTA also found the President liable for massive human rights violations and political persecution, citing her failure to stop abductions and killings of political activists allegedly committed by policemen and soldiers.

It also urged "the international community to withdraw aid and recognition from the Arroyo government."

The CCTA asked the President or her representatives to offer evidence in her defense but nobody came.

There was no immediate reaction from the President, who is visiting Saudi Arabia, or her officials but her camp has dismissed the mock trial as an attempt by power-hungry opposition rabble rousers to revive complaints similar to the impeachment raps that were trashed by Congress last September.

The committee report was received by the House Minority Leader Francis Escudero and civil society leader Bro. Armin Luistro of the Bukluran ng Katotohanan. Escudero said the minority was already preparing a fresh impeachment complaint against Ms Arroyo.

"Whether we like it or not, impeachment will still be the only proper way to have the President removed," Escudero said.

Palace set to appeal SC rulings on EO 464, PP 1017

MALACANANG WILL FILE WITHIN the next few days its motion for reconsideration striking down the Supreme Court ruling on Executive Order No. 464 and Proclamation 1017.

"We are hopeful the High Court will somehow, after taking second look, reconsider those portions of the decision that we will appeal," said Solicitor General Antonio Nachura in a phone interview.

Malacañang's legal team suffered string of setbacks in the last few weeks with the tribunal churning down the President's calibrated pre-emptive response

(CPR) policy on street protesters; an order barring all Cabinet officials, government executives and uniformed officers from appearing in congressional hearings without her consent (EO 464); and her declaration of a state of national emergency (PP 1017).

Nachura said the government would appeal the ruling on 1017 specifically on its decision that President Macapagal-Arroyo "must first get legislative authorization to exercise her power granted under the Constitution (section 17 of Article 12) to take over public and businesses vested with public interest."

Malacañang is also set to appeal the high court's ruling on the unconstitutionality of warrantless arrests and the violation of the freedom of expression in the government's physical presence in a daily broadsheet.

Nachura said his team would file by Friday or Monday the government's appeal on the SC decision on EO 464.

Nachura said the government would not appeal anymore the ruling on CPR considering that the justices upheld the constitutionality of the "no permit, no rally" under Batasan Pambansa 880. Police officials, meanwhile, remained baffled about the meaning of the high tribunal's decisions.

The Philippine National Police wanted a "clarification" of the court's ruling on the arrest of demonstrating activists last February.

"According to them (justices), warrantless arrest is unconstitutional but we found that there is a provision in our rules of court that legalizes warrantless arrest," said police spokesperson Senior Supt. Samuel Pagdilao, himself a lawyer.

Pagdilao cited Section 5, Article 113 of the rules of court as permitting such arrests. He also maintained that their actions that week were "well within the parameters" of this rule.

"Now, they are saying that it is rendered unconstitutional. So we want that clarified further," he added.

Pagdilao's immediate superior, PNP chief Director General Arturo Lomibao, said their actions were "defensible."

"So I don't think there should be an apology," he said when asked if the SC's series of rulings against the government meant that an apology to people the police had arrested or places they had raided was in order.

Palace names 4 new justices to appeals court

MALACAÑANG YESTERDAY announced the appointment of four new associate justices in the Court of Appeals and one in the Sandiganbayan, and a new deputy commissioner in the Commission on Audit.

Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita made the announcement during a briefing in Malacañang.

The four new appellate associate justices—Romeo E. Barza (Makati City Regional Trial Court Branch 208), Marlene Sison (presiding judge Quezon City RTC Branch 85), Agustin Dizon (Quezon City RTC Branch 80), and Sixth Marilla Jr. (Makati City RTC Branch 138)—have a combined experience of 131 years in law practice.

The new Sandiganbayan associate justice is Samuel Martires (La Union RTC Branch 32) has 29 years experience in law practice.

Ermita also announced the appointment of Juanito D. Espino Jr. who will take the place of former COA deputy commissioner Emmanuel Delman.

RP asks Viets to explain cell site on Spratlys

THE PHILIPPINES WILL seek clarification from Vietnam over reports that a state firm will soon launch a mobile phone service in the disputed Spratly Islands, a foreign office source said Wednesday.

Vinaphone is expected to launch its service in the islands next month, Nguyen Huu Thuong, director of a government telecom service center based in Vietnam's central province of Danang, told AFP Monday.

"We have not received any official confirmation on that report," the foreign office source said, stressing that a code of conduct among claimants to the Spratlys prevents any of them putting up structures that could disrupt the status quo.

The Spratlys chain is claimed in whole or in part by Brunei, China, Malaysia, the Philippines, Taiwan and Vietnam.

All except Brunei maintain a military presence in the area, which is considered a potential flashpoint in Southeast Asia. AFP

Drilon-Villar Senate deal to face test

THE TERM-SHARING AGREEMENT BETWEEN SENATE President Franklin Drilon and Sen. Manuel Villar Jr. will be put to a test when the 13th Congress opens its third regular session in July.

Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile yesterday added his voice to the growing opinion that the pair could not impose their pact on the chamber, and maintained that anybody aspiring for the Senate presidency has to go through a vote.

"With due respect to them, they can't decide for the chamber. Their decision is their decision. It will still have to be submitted to the chamber for voting. We're not bound by any agreements in the Senate," he said in a briefing.

"I'm not party to the agreement," he added, echoing a view expressed by Senators Richard Gordon and Manuel "Mar" Roxas II.

Enrile said that if Drilon would voluntarily yield his post in July, Villar or any senator for that matter should be prepared to contest the post in an election.

"If Frank Drilon, being a party to the gentleman's agreement, will voluntarily relinquish, then Manny Villar will be free to seek position. I don't know if there's anyone who would challenge him," he said in a briefing.

Question of numbers

"It's a question of numbers," he added, noting that anybody who could muster 13 votes in the 23-member chamber could snare the post. "Anybody can become the Senate President if he has the numbers."

The senator said he expected Drilon as well as those who voted for him for Senate President to support Villar if he declares interest, but he himself kept the press guessing how he would vote if the time comes.

"I don't know yet how I will vote in that event," he said. Enrile had joined the bloc of Drilon, who broke away and called on President Macapagal-Arroyo to resign in July last year amid charges she stole the presidency in the May 2004 elections.

Drilon, who is attending the Inter-Parliamentary Union summit in Kenya, and Villar could not be reached for comment.

The pair forged the agreement on July 12, 2004 supposedly to avert acrimonious wrangling and ensure smooth legislative work in view of the then looming fiscal crisis.

Under the deal, Drilon would serve as Senate President during the first two years, or the first two regular sessions of the 13th Congress, and Villar, the third year or third regular session, which begins in July this year.

House slams Senate for 'obsession' to oust GMA

By Michael Lim Ubac

IN AN APPARENT DISREGARD OF INTER-parliamentary courtesy, the House majority yesterday lashed at the Senate for its "obsession to oust" President Macapagal-Arroyo after senators vowed to pursue their legislative inquiries into the raging espionage case and the "Hello Garci" wiretapping scandal.

"Their obsession to oust President Arroyo has blinded their primary task to legislate. They are now the National Fault Finding Investigators of the Republic," said House Majority Leader Prospero C. Nograles.

After a month-long Lenten break, Congress will resume its sessions on Monday.

Nograles said that should the Senate continue neglecting its legislative function, it "may as well be the police or the Commission on Audit and the Office of the Ombudsman, the fiscal and the judge combined not senators of the Republic."

He renewed his call to Senate President Franklin Drilon to focus on legislating important measures instead of pursuing congressional inquiries which, he said, was aimed at discrediting the Arroyo government.

Nograles, who heads the powerful House committee on rules, issued the statement after the Senate vowed to continue its investigations of controversies and allegations against the President and her officials.

What is espionage?

On Monday, Sen. Rodolfo Biazon, chair of the Senate committee on national defense, said he was considering conducting an inquiry into the espionage case involving former intelligence analyst Leandro Aragoncillo and three opposition leaders, to come up with a law on espionage.

So far, espionage had not been not clearly defined in the Articles of War, said Biazon.

Biazon also said the hearings on the "Hello Garci" wiretapping scandal would resume next week and would focus on electoral fraud.

Nograles said several House-approved measures in the Senate had long been overdue.

Congress has only nine more days before its sine die adjournment on June, followed by more than a month-long recess.

Up for deliberations by the Senate are the House-approved P1-trillion national budget appropriations bill, anti-terror bill, bill exempting minimum wage earners from tax, housing department bill and billion trees bill, among others.

"They are wasting time investigating without legislating," Nograles said.

House Deputy Majority Leader Rodolfo Antonino had a different take on the Senate inquiries and its continued refusal to support Charter change.

"Obviously, the opposition is still sticking to their plot of ousting the President and Vice President Noli de Castro in order to install their own kind of President, who obviously would be Senate President Franklin Drilon following the constitutional succession of power," said Antonino.

The pro-administration lawmaker expected that once Ms Arroyo was ousted, De Castro would be forced to resign, while Drilon would become acting President.

"As such, he must call for election for both positions under Article 7, Section 10 of the 1987 Constitution where he can also run for President," said Antonino, explaining that as acting President, "Drilon, the candidate, would have the entire executive branch, the Armed Forces, the Philippine National Police and the local government units at his disposal to ensure victory."

Death sentence of 79 convicts commuted to life

PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-ARROYO HAS granted executive clemency to 79 death convicts barely a month after announcing her new policy of foregoing any executions under her watch.

Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita said the order commuting the sentence of the 79 death convicts was signed by Ms Arroyo on May 4. The list was endorsed by the Department of Justice and Bureau of Corrections.

This move has come as no surprise after the President announced in her Easter message this year that she was commuting the maximum penalty on all death row convicts to life imprisonment.

But Malacañang executives had to clarify the President's policy after legal experts questioned the President's move to commute the death penalty on a wholesale basis when the laws clearly state that such pardon be granted on a case-by-case basis.

Malacañang also announced that the President was endorsing as urgent a bill seeking the abolition of the death penalty in keeping with the Catholic Church's stand on capital punishment. No execution has been undertaken under the Arroyo administration.

TANAUAN POLL CASE SC upholds Comelec ruling ousting mayor

By Armand N. Nocum in Manila, and Marlon Ramos, PDI Southern Luzon Bureau

THE SUPREME COURT HAS upheld the decision of the Commission on Elections declaring Sonia Torres-Aquino as the duly elected mayor of Tanauan City, Batangas, ending a dispute that led to the freezing of the city's bank account since last February.

In a four-page resolution released last Monday, the court threw out a petition by former Mayor Alfredo C. Corona questioning the Comelec's ruling and asking the court to restrain the poll body from enforcing its decision.

Immediately after the Supreme Court's ruling was released last Monday, Torres-Aquino told reporters at her office that she expected Corona to respect the decision "because he himself said that he would only honor a decision from the Supreme Court."

Economic development

"Finally, the city of Tanauan can now move on," she added. "With the decision of the Supreme Court, we can proceed with our plans for better service and economic development for our people."

She called on pro-Corona city councilors to pass a resolution allowing her to enter into financial transactions in behalf of the city government. The council had refused to pass such a resolution, prompting the local branch of the Land Bank of the Philippines to freeze the city's bank account as it could not honor the mayor's signature without the resolution.

The mayoral row adversely affected the functions of the city government as Corona and his followers had originally refused to leave his office to protest the Comelec's decision to install Torres-Aquino as city mayor last Feb. 9. Corona eventually gave up the post and went to the Supreme Court.

The case stemmed from an election protest against Corona filed by Torres-Aquino which was assigned to the Comelec's second division, which had only Commissioners Mehool K. Saddain and Florentino Tuason Jr. as members. Comelec Chair Benjamin S. Abalos appointed Commissioner Rufino S.B. Javier as the third member.

On Dec. 22, the panel ruled in favor of Torres Aquino, with Tuason dissenting, and later issued a writ of execution.

En banc decision

But Corona petitioned for a reconsideration of the decision, and the case was taken up by the Comelec en banc. Two commissioners inhibited themselves, two voted for the motion but the two others voted to reject it.

But with the impending retirement of two commissioners, the Comelec decided en banc last Feb. 2 to enforce the writ of execution earlier issued by its second division, in effect upholding its earlier ruling.

It was at this point that Corona went to the Supreme Court, questioning Abalos' appointment of a third commissioner to the Comelec's second division. He said the Comelec should have also conducted another hearing.

But the high court said the Comelec rules and procedures "clearly sanctions the appointment made by (Abalos)."

The court also ruled that following the retirement of the two commissioners, the Comelec "may no longer set the case for rehearing." It added that "since the commission en banc was equally divided in opinion, the motion for reconsideration should be deemed lost," thus leaving the original decision of the Comelec's second division.

PHILAMLIFE STRENGTHENS MANAGEMENT TEAM AFTER POSTING RECORD PROFIT IN '05

MAKATI CITY, May 10, 2006 - Following a robust performance in 2005 with a record 44% consolidated net income growth for the year, The Philippine American Life and General Insurance Company (Philamlife), the country's number one life insurance company, bared the appointment of new executives to various posts in a bid to further strengthen the organization.

Philamlife president & CEO and American International Group Inc., (AIG) country manager Jose L. Cuisia, Jr. announced that the company's Board of Directors has elected Michel Khalaf as Deputy President and Chief Operating Officer, Jack Howell as Senior Vice President (and concurrent Philam Plans President and CEO), and Terrence Cummings as First Vice President & Head of Life Profit Center.

Mr. Khalaf will manage the insurance operations of Philamlife to include its sales, marketing, agency training, insurance operations, information technology, finance and administration, controllership and actuarial divisions. He will likewise be responsible for the operations of Philamlife's insurance subsidiaries and affiliates, Philam Plans, Inc., Philam Equitable Life Assurance Company, PhilamCare Health Systems, Inc., and Philam Financials Advisory Services, Inc.

Before Mr. Khalaf's current assignment, he held a number of senior management posts in different AIG companies in several countries. He started the Egypt operations of American Life Insurance Company (ALICO), where he served as General Manager for four years, and in 2001 was appointed regional Senior Vice President for Poland and New Operations. He also served as president and CEO of AMPLICO Life with responsibility over the life, pension and mutual fund operations in Poland and the life operations in Romania, Lithuania and Latvia.

Mr. Khalaf will report directly to Mr. Cuisia, who continues to maintain overall management responsibility over the Philam Group of Companies.

As FVP and Head of Life Profit Center, Mr. Cummings will formulate product development strategies, initiate new product ideas, identify market opportunities and distribution needs, implement new initiatives to enhance and monitor profitability and processing quality and effectiveness.

Prior to his appointment, Mr. Cummings was head of the Product Development team in China.

Mr. Howell is appointed Senior Vice President of Philamlife and will be seconded to Philam Plans as President & CEO. He will have management responsibility for Philam Plans to ensure the achievement of profitability, operational efficiency and compliance with local and corporate requirements.

He joined AIG in November 2002 as part of Domestic Brokerage Group Operations and was appointed Director of Financial Management, Life Division in March 2005. He moved to Hong Kong to assume the position of Vice President for Strategic Operations in December 2005. Prior to joining AIG, he worked in professional consulting firms such as Charles River Associates, Inc. and Boston Consulting Group.

His experience and expertise in financial management and strategic development will be invaluable in expanding the business success of Philam Plans.

Meanwhile, after being seconded to Philam Plans as president and CEO, Mr. Jesus G. Hofileña reassumes his key role in Philamlife as Executive Vice President for Sales, Marketing and Agency Training to fully focus on new sales & marketing initiatives aimed at maintaining the company's leadership in the life insurance industry. During his stewardship in Philam Plans, he was able to maintain the company's leadership in the pre-need industry despite the difficulties encountered by the sector and the challenges confronting the organization.

This development is part of AIG's worldwide effort to share its global insurance and financial expertise among its local member companies spread across 130 countries and jurisdictions. "With AIG's formidable financial strength, unrivaled distribution, innovative products and the industry's most talented professionals, we expect this move to further strengthen the leadership of Philamlife in the country," according to Mr. Cuisia.

He further adds, "these new management changes will help ensure that Philamlife has the strongest management team to carry out our strategies and business plans for the future. Each of these new executives has a proven track record and substantial international exposure through AIG's global operations."

Philamlife is the largest and most diversified life insurance company in the country. It is the only financial institution to ever receive the Platinum Trusted Brand Award.

Search for RP seamen pressed

THE PHILIPPINES YESTERDAY URGED THE South African government to resume search and rescue operations for 26 mostly Filipino crewmen lost at sea after their vessel sank last week.

The appeal was also joined by the Romanian and Greek governments, the Philippine foreign office said in a statement.

The Greek-registered MV Alexandros T bulk carrier sank off the southeastern coast of South Africa last week in stormy weather.

Eighteen Filipino crewmen were among the 26 still missing, while six Filipinos and a Romanian were plucked to safety after hours in rough seas.

Garduce sets final assault on Everest

By Alculn Papa

VETERAN MOUNTAINEER ROMI GARDUCE is getting ready for the final assault on Mt. Everest, the highest mountain in the world.

In an interview over a phone and video patch, Garduce said an assault would be possible in the next few days until next week but would depend largely on the weather.

He said Everest Camp 4 had just been opened and was being stocked with supplies of the different expeditions.

Garduce, who is currently resting at the Everest Base Camp after reaching Camp 3 over the weekend, said an assault on the summit will take around seven to eight days from Base Camp.

"We need just a little more patience. Please pray for good weather and good health. I've been lucky because I'm acclimatizing very well. I'm fine," Garduce told his audience in Filipino.

FMEE at Camp 3

Meanwhile, two members of the First Philippine Mt. Everest Expedition Team (FMEE), Leo Oracion and Pastor Emata, are already at Camp 3, according to co-expedition leader Butch Sebastian.

"They are setting up ropes to Camp 4 and within the week or two, weather permitting, they will try for the summit," Sebastian told the INQUIRER.

In August last year, adventure racers Oracion and Emata reached the summit Mt. Muztagh-Ata (24,758 feet) in the Himalayan range and set the record for the highest altitude reached by a Filipino.

The record was broken a month later when Garduce, a systems analyst in his 30s, reached the peak of Mt. Cho-Oyu (26,906 feet), the sixth-highest mountain in the world.

Good weather is important for an assault attempt. Once the climbers reach Camp 4, they will sleep a few hours only before making their final push for the summit at around midnight or early morning. This will allow them to descend in the afternoon of the next day.

The FMEE is being supported by ABS-CBN while Garduce is being backed by rival network GMA 7.

THE DAILY GOSPEL

4th Week of Easter

1st Reading: Acts 13:13-25
Gospel: John 13:16-20

After Jesus had washed the feet of the disciples he said, "Truly, I say to you, the servant is not greater than his master, nor is the messenger greater than he who sent him. Understand this, and blessed are you if you put it into practice."

"I am not speaking of you all, because I know the ones I have chosen and the Scripture has to be fulfilled that says, 'The one who shared my table has risen against me. I tell you this now before it happens, so that when it does happen, you may know that I am He.'"

"Truly, I say to you, whoever welcomes the one I send, welcomes me, and whoever welcomes me, welcomes the One who sent me."

Commentary
Using history, the law, and the prophets to introduce them to Jesus the Savior, Paul and his companions preach to the Jews who live far from Jerusalem and to all others who are interested. The people have heard of John the Baptist and so Paul uses John's words, exhorting them to look for another who comes after him—to look for Jesus. And Jesus confirms this mission saying: "He who accepts anyone I send accepts me and in accepting me accepts him who sent me." We are all bound together in the Father, the Son/Word and Spirit.

GMA IN THE COMPANY OF ROYALS

ALL-AROUND CORDIALITY marks the meeting in Riyadh between President Arroyo and Crown Prince Sultan bin Abdulaziz (extreme right), who's also the deputy prime minister and minister of defense on Monday. Before they settled down to business, the prince hosted a state dinner for the President.

LADIES OF NOTE: President Arroyo is flanked by Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas and Sen. Miriam Defensor-Santiago during Ms Arroyo's meeting with Filipino workers in Jeddah. MALACANANG PHOTO

SOMETHING TO WRITE HOME ABOUT: OFWs eagerly reach out to President Arroyo when she meets with them at the ballroom of Le Gulf Meridien in Al Khobar on the third day of her four-day state visit to the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia.

BAREFOOT IN THE SAND: Ms Arroyo with a Saudi Aramco official visits the oil company at the Sheiba desert which holds Petron's majority ownership. Saudi's oil minister assures the President that Saudi Arabia is prepared to make up for any oil supply shortage in the Philippines.

ROUSING WELCOME: In Jeddah on Tuesday, Ms Arroyo is met at the Royal Terminal of the King Abdulaziz International Airport by local officials led by the Royal Chief of Protocol of the Western Region and members of the Philippine Consulate.

Another batch consisting of 287 pardoned OFWs will leave on May 13 aboard a chartered flight for Manila, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said.

Ms Arroyo broke the news about the pardons after a state dinner hosted by King Abdullah on Sunday following her arrival in Riyadh for a four-day visit.

The Saudi monarch initially talked about pardoning only 50 Filipinos convicted of crimes ranging from theft to prostitution.

The list grew to 138 on Monday. On Tuesday night, Sto. Tomas said it could well go beyond 300 as Saudi authorities were still consulting with the Philippine consular officers about the release of Filipinos jailed in their areas.

"The King has given his orders, and they are complying," said Sto. Tomas.

'A gift'

She said some 400 Filipinos were languishing in jails in the desert kingdom, where about 1 million Filipinos work. She said even those convicted of embezzlement would be released and monetary claims against them written off by King Abdullah.

Staff members at the consular offices were working overtime preparing the travel documents of the pardoned Filipinos.

In her speech before the Filipino community at the Le Meridien Hotel in Riyadh on Tuesday night, the President expressed her appreciation for the "warmth and generosity" of King Abdullah. She said she was pleased with the royal gesture and called it a "gift."

Feted with songs, dances

In her meetings with overseas Filipino workers at the open court of the Philippine Embassy compound and the ballrooms of the Le Meridien hotels in Jeddah and Riyadh, Ms Arroyo was feted with Philippine songs and dances.

Love of country, as expressed in songs like "Ako ay Pilipino" permeated the venues. Without doubt, the favorite was "Babalik ka rin," a haunting melody of one longing to return home after years of staying abroad.

But the idea of coming home seemed just impossible to many.

Surprised at the knowledge that Ms Arroyo was at the Le Meridien Hotel in Jeddah, a mail carrier from Bulacan who delivered a package to the business center at the hotel said: "Good that she's here. Maybe she could see how the embassy people are treating OFWs here."

According him, many embassy staff members were not doing enough to help OFWs who run away from abusive employers.

Looking after own selves

"We really have to look after ourselves here," said the man, who said he had been in Jeddah for six years and asked that his name not be used.

But he would not go home, either, saying there was no job waiting for him in the Philippines. It was a question thrown at Sto. Tomas in her meetings with Filipinos.

A nurse who had been in Damman for 16 years turned pensive when asked if she would consider repatriating. "I have a husband and a baby here. Our life is OK," she said.

Staying put despite risks

In fact, Filipinos practically provide the human engine that runs Saudi Arabia, working anywhere from the airport terminal to shopping malls, restaurants, hotels, hospitals and many homes. Pinoy villages have also sprouted, including one in Riyadh. The Sarawat small in Jeddah has become a favorite hangout.

Roy Cimatu, special Philippine envoy to the Middle East, said Filipinos preferred to stay abroad even under harsh conditions to earn money to send home.

When the Philippine government offered to provide free transport to OFWs who wanted to go home at the height of the US war in Iraq, Cimatu said less than a dozen of them availed themselves of the offer.

Under the conditions, Cimatu said the government could only "keep them out of harm's way in their areas of work."

But the Filipino workers still yearn for home, at least in their minds and in their songs.

medical services, education and utilities.

Although nearly a third of the P1-trillion national budget has been earmarked for social services, Ms Arroyo apparently feels this is not enough and has to have full control of the funds of Pagcor and PCSO as well.

Pagcor was originally under the Office of the President. It was moved to the Department of Finance in 2004 in a bid to inject more professionalism in its management and maximize its earning capacity.

Priority projects

Based on its charter, Presidential Decree No. 1869, Pagcor is compelled to submit periodic reports of all infrastructure and socio-civic projects that were bankrolled from its earnings.

Executive Order No. 330-A signed on March 6 returned Pagcor to Malacañang's control in a bid to tap funding to "finance priority infrastructure and socio-civic projects as determined by the President."

Pagcor remitted P1.046 billion to the President's social fund in 2004 or more than double its contribution of P475.5 million in 2003. This was exclusive of the government's 50-percent cut in the Pagcor's revenues which amounted to P9.196 billion in 2004, up 16 percent from P7.871 billion in 2003.

A government executive, who refused to be identified because he had not received clearance to speak on the issue, said that Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita had been tasked to screen all purchases of Pagcor worth more than P1 million.

Three weeks after moving Pagcor, the President signed on March 27 Executive Order No. 520 which mandated the return of the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office to Malacañang from the Department of Health.

Justification

The President justified the move by noting that it would "facilitate coordination of policies and programs with the view of ensuring the effective implementation of the social agenda of the President."

In the EO, Ms Arroyo cited PCSO's vital support to her social agenda as the principal agency raising and providing funds for health programs, medical assistance and services and charities national in character.

Centralizing ad funds

The return of Pagcor and PCSO to Malacañang's fold comes on the heels of the President's decision to centralize the government's advertising funds under her communications group led by Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye.

All advertising and information campaigns to be undertaken by government agencies and government-owned and controlled corporations such as Pagcor and PCSO have to be screened and approved by the Palace.

Court grants Nur's plea for house arrest

St. Luke's Medical Center where he and Usman have been confined since Jan. 28, following a court order granting them a medical furlough.

The two accused rebels have since asked for several extensions of their hospital stay, citing the need for continued medical treatment.

In his order, Marella said the two detainees would be allowed to live at the New Manila address for medical reasons but would continue to be under the custody of the Philippine National Police for the entire period.

The judge said a hearing would be in one and a half months at the New Manila house or the hospital—should the two accused happen to be confined there at the time—to determine if his order would need to be amended.

Detained for 4 years

Misuari and Usman had been detained for four years at Fort Sto. Domingo in Sta. Rosa, Laguna, for their alleged role in the Jolo uprising in which some 100 people were killed.

Marella said he found merit in the petition for house arrest for several reasons. He said the 65-year-old Misuari was found to have hypertension, while Usman, 68, was being treated for diabetes.

The judge also considered the recommendation of the two rebels' attending physician, Dr. Ma. Bella Siasoco, who said "the place of confinement of both accused must have quick access to medical facilities" so they could be brought to the hospital within five minutes in an emergency.

Marella noted that it would take from one to three hours to get to St. Luke's from Fort Sto. Domingo. The judge also cited the lack of adequate medical facilities in the Sta. Rosa facility where only one physician was attending to some 800 detainees.

The judge directed PNP Director General Arturo Lomibao to supervise the implementation of the transfer of the detainees, and the PNP health service director to monitor their medical condition and to submit a weekly report to the court.

Case for reinvestigation

Court proceedings on the rebellion case have been suspended since February, after Marella remanded the case to the Department of Justice for reinvestigation on a defense motion.

'Humanitarian gesture'

By Fe Zamora

DAMMAN, SAUDI ARABIA (VIA PLDT)—PRESIDENTIAL Adviser on the Peace Process Jesus Dureza said yesterday that placing Nur Misuari under house arrest was a humanitarian gesture that had no bearing on his rebellion case.

Misuari's house arrest came just as a high-level mission from the influential Organization of Islamic Conference was to arrive in Mindanao to monitor the implementation of the second phase of the 1996 peace agreement with Moro National Liberation Front which Misuari founded in the 70s.

A Philippine delegation led by Dureza met with the OIC officials in Jeddah on Tuesday to finalize the plans for the Islamic mission to Mindanao this month.

Dureza said the mission underscored the OIC intentions to "work very closely with the government."

"There is renewed effort now to bring MNLF and government and prepare a joint catch-up plan for Mindanao," he said.

arrest filed by Misuari's lawyer with the Makati court last month, Misuari and Usman asked to be allowed to stay at the Quezon City house.

But the defense did not disclose who the owner of the residence was or if the two detainees would be renting or living with relatives or friends.

AFP admits taking cut ...

the military to cover the costs of their deployment abroad, the Armed Forces admitted yesterday.

Predictably, the 330 soldiers sent to UN peacekeeping missions in Haiti and Liberia in January did not take kindly to the cut.

Their complaint has reached the notice of the United Nations, such that the military has been directed by the Department of Foreign Affairs to explain.

According to Col. Dante Balao, head of the AFP Peacekeeping Operations Center, a "study committee" has found that the military loses as much as P4 million whenever it sends a 165-member contingent abroad for a six-month tour of duty.

Balao told reporters yesterday in Camp Aguinaldo that the AFP was spending to ensure that its troops were in "tip-top condition" when sent to international missions.

He said the expenses covered uniforms, helmets, radios and other personal gear, as well as training seminars and vaccinations worth up to P15,000 per soldier.

Balao said these expenses were shouldered by the Philippine government and not reimbursed by the United Nations.

Not enough

Actually, the United Nations reimburses governments which send peacekeeping missions abroad for Contingent-Owned Equipment (COE), or the heavy equipment brought by their troops.

The United Nations also reimburses governments for the troop cost allowance (TCA), which, in the case of soldiers sent to Haiti and Liberia, amounts to $1,000 a month each.

But Balao said: "The reimbursement we get from the UN is not enough to cover our expenses."

To enable the AFP to cover its expenses, he said, it decided that each of the 330 soldiers sent to Haiti and Liberia would take a cut in their $1,000 monthly TCA.

But he would not say how much was taken from each soldier.

The AFP said the monthly TCA would be equivalent to three times the base pay of soldiers, and two and a half times the base pay of officers.

A corporal, the lowest ranking soldier deployed, would receive a monthly TCA of P29,004, or thrice his monthly base pay of P9,668.

Demoralization

In March, Foreign Secretary Alberto Romulo Jr. reportedly sent a memo to Defense Secretary Avelino Cruz Jr. endorsing the "very urgent" recommendations of Ambassador Laro Baja Jr., the Philippines' permanent representative to the United Nations.

Baja had urged the military to "temporarily hold implementation of the TCA rate reductions and to pay our deployed peacekeepers their allowances in full to address possible demoralization."

He also recommended that the AFP, DFA and Philippine National Police draw up safeguards to ensure that UN reimbursements were used "to support peacekeeping-related functions."

Balao said he spoke last week with Arthur Corsino, executive director of the DFA's United Nations and International Organizations, and Jesus Domingo, one of the bureau's directors, and explained to them the military's action.

"They have accepted our reasons," Balao said.

Redeployment

In 2000, after a 40-year break, the Philippines again started sending troops to UN peacekeeping missions.

Balao said that in the first few years, the deployments did not hurt the military budget because the COE reimbursements were sufficient to cover the expenses for personnel.

But in recent missions, the costs have exceeded the reimbursements because the military could no longer send heavy equipment abroad, he said.

Again, Balao could not say how much losses were incurred by the AFP in these deployments.

He said the study committee estimated the cost of deploying a 165-member contingent for a six-month mission at P65 million—an amount already including the reduced allowances.

To justify the cut in the soldiers' TCA, the AFP dug up a circular dated Sept. 6, 1950, which states that troops sent abroad are entitled to allowances equivalent to twice their base pay.

'Compensation for RP'

Balao said the TCA was not supposed to go directly to the soldiers, anyway.

"We are correcting our previous error when we thought that the TCA is a direct compensation of the troops from the UN. It's a compensation for the country for sending troops," he said.

According to Balao, Filipino peacekeeping forces should even be thankful because soldiers get a measly P240 a month in combat pay when they are assigned to war zones in the country.

He also said the deployed troops had been briefed on the cut in their TCA.

But an e-mail sent to the INQUIRER by complaining soldiers indicated that they were surprised by the reduced allowance.

The Philippines has deployed a total of 370 troops in six UN peacekeeping missions—in Liberia, Haiti, the Ivory Coast, Burundi, Sudan and East Timor.

It also has a small peacekeeping force in East Timor that is sponsored by the European Union.

Population growth down to a rate of 1.95% target would boost the Philippines' chances of hitting its poverty-reduction goal over the medium term, he said.

The government has set a target of reducing the proportion of population below the poverty line from 45.3 percent in 1991 to 22.7 percent by 2015.

The latest data from the NSCB showed that as of 2003, the proportion of the population living in poverty stood at 30.4 percent.

Reducing the number of people living in poverty to 22.7 percent of the population was a commitment that the Philippines made under the Millennium Development Goals of the United Nations.

Unsustainable

Under these goals, UN member-countries pledged to stamp out extreme poverty by 2015.

But Ernesto Pernia, a professor of economics at the University of the Philippines, said a 1.95-percent annual population growth rate was unsustainable.

He pointed out that it was higher compared with other developing countries in Asia.

Pernia said the Philippines should be able to slow down its population growth rate to as low as 1.6 percent, similar to that of Bangladesh, to be able to meet its poverty-reduction goals.

He described the government's effort to arrest the growing population as "practically nil," and said there had not been enough programs to promote birth control.

In response, Neri said it had been a policy of the national government to entrust population control programs to the local government units.

He said determining appropriate measures to control population growth was up to the LGUs.

With the Philippines dominated by Catholic voters, the government has yet to make a tough stand against population growth and has left it up to couples to choose their preferred method of family planning.

The Philippines is the world's 12th most populous state, according to an Agence France-Presse report.

It said the mid-2006 population was projected at 87 million, putting the country just behind Mexico and ahead of Vietnam.

Within 4 years

"In a span of four years, the country will be populated by over 94 million people. This translates to a yearly population growth of 1.95 percent from 2005 to 2010," Estrella Domingo, officer in charge of the NSCB's office of the secretary general, said in an announcement posted at the board's website.

Domingo said the figure was based on the 2000 census-based national, regional and provincial population projections released by the National Statistics Office (NSO) last April 4.

A report from the NSO projected that the population would grow from 76.5 million, as of the latest population census in May 2000, to 141.7 million in 2040.

"This means that 65 million people would be added to the nation's population between 2000 and 2040, which is a span of 40 years, even if the average annual growth rate is projected to drastically decline from 2.34 percent during the 1990-2000 period to around 1.0 percent during the 2030-2040 period," the NSO said.

"The population is projected to grow by 1.95 percent in the 2005-2010 period, from 85.3 million in 2005 to 94.0 million in 2010," it said.

Pro-critics

The latest projection on population growth appeared to favor opponents of the Responsible Parenthood and Population Management Act, a consolidated House bill seeking to provide "free and full access to adequate and relevant information on reproductive health and a full range of family methods and devices."

Critics, particularly the Catholic Church hierarchy, have denounced the effort, saying it was merely a sugar-coated piece of legislation that essentially targeted population control.

Others have alleged that some of the measure's proponents stood to benefit from the expected arrival of a "condom" industry in the country should contraception be more aggressively promoted.

At present, contraceptives in the country are basically sourced from foreign donation, particularly from the United Nations Population Fund. Donations are expected to stop by 2008.

A major argument between proponents and critics of population control, as being presented by the government, involves statistics.

Proponents claim the population growth rate is 2.34 percent while critics maintain the figure is only 1.94 percent.

Curiously, both parties usually base their numbers on the NSCB, the country's policymaking and coordinating body on statistical matters.

In another post titled "For the Record" at its website, the NSCB said the 2.34 percent growth rate was the "average annual population growth rate for 1990-2000 based on actual 1990 and 2000 population census results."

"The latest population projections based on the 2000 census shows that the average annual growth rates for the periods 2000-2005 and 2005-2010 are projected to be 2.05 and 1.94 percent, respectively," it said, adding:

"These values should be interpreted with caution as these are projections based on certain assumptions of fertility and mortality, and are projected annual average growths for the periods given."

"Thus, the estimated 1.94 percent growth is projected as the average annual growth during the period 2005 to 2010. If the growth rate trend is decreasing from the 2.05 percent during the 2000-2005 period, then the 1.94-percent growth rate is likely to be attained around 2007-2008."

Women outliving men

In the latest announcement, the NSCB said Filipino women were expected to outlive men by 5.5 years. But the number of years was less by half than that five years earlier.

"Males (47.3 million) will still outnumber the females (46.7 million)," according to the NSCB.

trates the continuing battle between the "pro-life" camp, which frowns on contraception or abortion as a means of controlling population growth, and the "prochoice" sector, which advocates a strong information campaign and the availability of family planning methods to couples.

Sally, a community worker of Pro-Life Philippines, firmly believes that poverty does not always strip a child of his/her right to life.

She had heard similar tales of woe while going from house to house, educating couples on natural family planning and responsible parenthood.

"Here, you'll see 14-year-old girls getting pregnant and having no idea of what to do with their child," she said sadly.

Switching places

The mother, a jobless wanderer in the port area, came to Sally in August 2004, two months before she was due to deliver.

The father was nowhere to be found. "She really wanted to have an abortion but I told her it's wrong," Sally said, recounting the circumstances.

During their conversation, the two women seemed to have switched places. It was Sally who was desperate to keep the child.

"If you really want him, you take care of my pregnancy and the child," the mother said, essentially transferring the "burden" to Sally.

Sally agreed, took the teenager in, and arranged for bed space at a nearby lying-in clinic.

From then on, with a "second mother" willing to help her carry the load, the teenager practically breezed through her second pregnancy.

It crossed Sally's mind that the teenager might soon experience an epiphany of sorts. Perhaps, she would regret her attitude and decide to take care of her child.

That was what Sally thought. On Oct. 27, 2004, three days after Sandin Lee was born, his mother disappeared.

Daily survival

The family survives on Salme's P150 daily pay from collecting and selling scraps for a nearby junk shop. Metilyn was recently hired by a sock factory in Quezon City, earning a salary way below the minimum.

The three of them operate on a daily budget not exceeding P50.

In the morning, Sally buys an "order" of a fish dish costing P10 at the carinderia next door. The dish is spread for the entire day's meals, as is the kilo of rice Sally usually buys for P22.

Water does not come cheap at P5 for every plastic container. Electricity costs P100 a week for this household that does not have an electric fan.

What did the arrival of Sandin Lee do to the family's daily budget?

"The Lord will take pity," Salme said, apparently finding encouragement from a framed biblical passage hanging on a wall in the shanty: "Never will I leave you, never will

I forsake you (Deuteronomy 31:8)." ;
Said Sally: "We will never be abandoned by The One up there. I really believe that God will always provide."

Answered prayers

Mother and son's belief are not exactly confined to the metaphysical. Having been with Sandin Lee for nearly two years now, they know their prayers are being answered.

The meager income Salme and Metilyn earn are proving sufficient for the family's, including the baby's, needs.

Sandin Lee never misses on his milk formula (P75 for a box good for three days). His immunization is basically complete at this stage of his development.

In fact, the family managed to throw a small party when he turned a year old on Oct. 24 last year.

There was a cake, pancit, bread, and juice generously shared by other kids living in the unfinished Building 3, where the family, along with others, had built their shanty.

Salme even found some balloons in the course of scavenging for scraps.

"There was even a clown!" Salme recalled. "Come to think of it, [rearing Sandin Lee] is not really impossible. It's just a matter of working hard and keeping your faith in God."

Crises

There have been critical moments.

Twice before he turned a year old, the child fell ill—the first time with severe diarrhea and vomiting, the second time with asthma-like symptoms.

Each time, Sally emptied her savings of not more than P700, or borrowed from their similarly impoverished neighbors.

Each time, too, she and her children spent sleepless nights huddled around their little angel.

(Sandin Lee's biological mother showed up lately to perfunctorily check on him. She was with her new boyfriend and pregnant with her third child.)

Sally has only humble dreams for Sandin Lee. She wants him to have a good education and a decent and stable job in the future.

At this point, her priority is to find a way to get him out of their forsaken community.

Moving out

Called "temporary housing" and comprising Happy Land, Helping Foundation and Aroma, the place is a showcase of the permanence of poverty.

There is simply nothing happy about it, or anything to help the residents escape the stench of garbage.

At Building 3, some 200 families, including Sally's family, wake up daily to piles of garbage, vandalized walls, a network of clotheslines, a queue of plastic containers.

The view is occasionally changed when police barge in looking for a thief or a drug addict.

Sally is convinced that the future will not be bright for her baby boy if they stay put.

"We have to move to a better place," she declared.

Palace won't lift finger to stop 'Da Vinci Code'

By Christine O. Ayendaño

A TOP AIDE TO PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-Arroyo said yesterday the Palace will not lift a finger to stop the showing of the controversial movie "The Da Vinci Code," but if he had his way the movie would not be played in Philippine theaters because it is "blasphemous."

"I don't see how we, as a Catholic nation or as practicing Catholics, would ever tolerate such a plot to be propagated in the name of freedom of expression," Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita told reporters at his weekly briefing.

Ermita said that while he has not read the best-selling book by Dan Brown, he found the storyline "blasphemous" as told to him by people who have read it.

"All I know it's something (about) our Lord Jesus and Mary Magdalene... Oh my gosh!" Ermita said, stopping in mid-sentence.

"Do you think that's something we should talk about? We might get struck by lightning," he added in Taglish.

The book and now the movie starring Oscar-winning actor Tom Hanks have come under attack from Catholic clergymen and Christian scholars who feel its story line is blasphemous. Both the book and the movie say that Jesus Christ and Mary Magdalene were married, establishing a bloodline kept secret through the ages by a clandestine organization that had Leonardo Da Vinci among its members.

Ermita said he was averse to the film because it would cause Filipinos to doubt their faith.

He said the movie would only arouse the curiosity of many "who do not have strong moorings to our faith" and "so it's better for us, as good Catholics or good religious people... to discourage this."

"If you were to ask me... we being a Catholic country, we should do everything not to allow it to be shown," he added.

Asked if that was the advice he would give the Movie and Television Review and Classification Board (MTRCB), Ermita replied, "I don't want to preempt the MTRCB. They have their own procedures in reviewing motion pictures... let the people judge the MTRCB on this particular issue."

Asked whether he would call for a boycott of the film should the MTRCB approve its showing, Ermita said he would not.

Justice Secretary Raul Gonzalez, who also attended the briefing, said he had read part of the book and was "repelled" by it. He said he has not finished reading it because he had no time to do so.

Uncivil war

IF THE ARROYO ADMINISTRATION IS SERIOUS about government reform, why is it politicizing the civil service? The official reason for its change-the-Constitution campaign is to have a more responsive—and ostensibly a more responsible—government structure.

But a mature democracy requires a strong civil service. That strength is defined, in part, as political independence; civil servants must perform their duties in the public's best interest, not according to the political, even partisan, interest of the appointing powers (usually, the Executive).

The Arroyo administration does not seem to understand this, however. From all indications, it is seeking to remake the Career Executive Service into a compliant tier of the government bureaucracy. It wants a responsive government, all right, but responsive to its own agenda.

The latest flashpoint in this war of attrition on career civil servants is the Mafia-like squeezing of the Career Service Executive Board. Consider the following sequence of events:

On March 20, the eight-person CSEB passed a resolution lambasting the "apparent politicization of the career service" by the Arroyo administration. The unprecedented resolution listed at least seven classes of "transgressions" of civil service laws and traditions.

On March 24, or four working days later, the board convened again, but without vice chair Ramon Nieva and member Gerardo Plana. They had been replaced by Malacañang.

On April 18, the board met for the third time, and member Fernando Cui was no longer present. He had been replaced by another Malacañang appointee. The rest were told that member Jarius Paguntalan would be replaced, too.

It looks likely that the next step in this sordid power play is the engineered ouster of Civil Service Commission Chair Karina David as chair of the CSEB. As CSC chair, David is the country's top civil servant. By tradition, the CSC chair serves as CSEB chief. But with half of the members of the CSEB serving only in an acting capacity, David is vulnerable to being voted out of the board. (Not out of the CSC, we must point out, since that is a constitutional office and the chair has a fixed term.)

The state of affairs in the board prompted one board official to complain: "This illustrates how politicized the situation is. President Arroyo has politicized even the CSEB. Any of the new board members can be replaced any time."

Let's think about that for a moment. The government body that oversees the country's career officials is now under the effective control of appointees who do not have a career to speak of. Because they sit only in an acting capacity, they can be removed at any time.

This is an outrage. But this is not an isolated case of government goodfellas applying the pressure on recalcitrant customers. It reflects the pattern the Arroyo administration has set and, in fact, it confirms that pattern.

The March 20 resolution's list of transgressions include career executive service officers (CESOs) being "placed on 'floating' status," "CESOs ... relieved from their CES positions and replaced by non-eligibles," even "CESOs ... relieved from their CES positions and demoted to non-CES positions." Most chillingly, the resolution quotes the chair of the Office of the President's Search Committee as saying that "a non-CES eligible occupying a CES position is considered a political appointee who serves at the pleasure of the President."

There, in the proverbial nutshell, is the whole problem. Contrary to the laws that established our career executive service, Malacañang is following a policy that allows the appointment of non-career officials to career positions, who are then considered to be serving at the President's discretion. The policy cynically subverts the very principle of the career service.

And to what end? The need for greater responsiveness may roll trippingly off the tongue of administration spokespersons, but these spinmeisters are being stingy with the truth. The truth is, career civil servants who take their responsibilities seriously are considered a threat to the administration.

Naturally. They have the public's real interest at heart.

VIEWPOINT

Juan L. Mercado

IN THIS NECK OF THE WOODS, POWER often involves "guns, goons and gold." Assorted pretenders, who claim to rule us, tell us that by their lives.

So, what are we to make of a king who, vested with legal power barely enough to decorate a state dinner, can move his nation by a single word?

"When King Bhumibol Adulyadej of Thailand speaks, his people listen," Asiaweek observed. "Only in extreme circumstances does the King touch the levers of power... But when he does, the intervention is decisive."

Untangle the mess left by the opposition boycott of earlier snap elections called by Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra, the Thai king told judges in a rare address. On Monday, the court ruled that last month's elections were unconstitutional and ordered fresh polls.

People Power-style rallies earlier, at Sanam Luang and the Democracy Monument in Bangkok, tied up the country. These protested Thaksin's high-handed rule and corruption. His tax-free sale of the 49.6-percent family stake in the telecoms company Shin Corp. to Singapore apparently was the straw that fractured the camel's back.

The king's address jolted the country. "Almost immediately, Thailand's main judicial bodies met to discuss the situation," BBC reported. "Then, in an about-face, the Democrats announced they'd take part in a new election, if the April poll was annulled."

Yet, each rare but critical Palace intervention has tenuous legal anchors at best. When the 18-year-old Bhumibol came to the throne in 1946, he was the ninth king of the Chakri Dynasty, established in the 18th century. Nothing more.

A ceremonial figurehead then, he had "no more power than it took to cut a ceremonial ribbon to open a new highway," Joseph Wright from the University of Michigan points out in his book, "The Balancing Act."

So, where did he get all this clout? As a United Nations officer stationed in Thailand for 17 years, we saw instances of his sway. Away from the press, he told the dictator Thanom Kittikachorn and his cabal that it would be best for the Thai people if they left. They did, on the next flight out.

In 1992, unelected prime minister, Gen. Suchinda Kraprayoon, and his rival Chamlong Srimuang knelt while he told them to stop the bloody fighting. The blood-letting stopped.

He denounced summary executions of alleged drug addicts—a point relevant for death squads in Davao and Cebu. He raised his voice against abuses of Muslim minorities. These were heeded.

Thaksin never revealed what the king told him in a private audience after the Shin Corp. scandal. But he stepped down as prime minister within a week.

Bhumibol today is the world's longest reigning—and arguably the most influential—monarch. For one thing, he didn't lapse into petrified adolescence. "From his earliest days, (the inexperienced, uncertain) king was never content to be the dignified stalking horse for a corrupt power elite," Wright points out.

Over the years, King Bhumibol gave of his time and talents in reaching the poor with programs and projects in the provinces, even as Thai politicians tried to isolate him in the capital. The grounds of Chitlada Palace in Bangkok and other royal homes became agricultural research stations. He put facilities of the Royal Household at the disposal of influential people and funneled their resources for the poor.

In so doing, he "defined a new role for the monarchy by becoming a neutral and transparent bridge between elite and people," Wright says. He refused to become the powerbroker for factions of the Thai elite and chose "to become a truly universal leader whom no single faction could dominate or oppose."

"It's quite normal that people should use the king," he said in a remarkably candid BBC interview. "But the way of using depends on us also, that we are doing things that are good for the country, and (that) we don't have any secrets."

Transparency and avoidance of self-interest were his keys. Few remember how the young king gingerly tested his right to advise government with suggestions on constitutional reform. Phibul Songkhro ignored them. In retaliation, Bhumibol left Bangkok on the day he was to preside over ceremonies to promulgate Phibul's constitution. That undercut its legitimacy.

These skirmishes over the years saw the king gradually emerge as an impartial national leader. Impeccable moral credentials underpinned his capacity to lead. He tells us that by his life. "To be honest, as this world goes is to be one man picked out of ten thousand," Hamlet says.

The king is now 79. What worries many (Filipinos, among others) is what happens when this remarkable man goes. "A society can only rush to the brink so often, without going over," Wright observes. "The Thai elite cannot continue to rely on the sort of sudden eleventh-hour resources that King Bhumibol has in the past provided."

Nagging questions of Thai constitutional reform, meanwhile, fester. They have a familiar ring to Filipinos: Thaksin used his position to influence what were meant to be independent bodies, like the Election Commission and the Constitutional Court, the opposition says.

And will Thaksin run again? Thaksin's substantial rural constituency would cheer if he contests the polls again. But that'd infuriate urban voters whose protest marches forced the snap elections.

How will this play out? We asked a Thai friend. He replied with a cryptic Thai proverb: "In the next life—late in the afternoon."

stitutions, the legal and the pseudo Constitutions, that held sway in this country before and during martial law, that sanctioned snap elections. Yet we had snap elections in January 1986. That is the one area where all that's needed is political will. You have a clamor for snap elections, a roar that is heard around the world, not least in the United States (the Americans were among those who forced snap elections on Marcos), you are going to have snap elections.

More to the point, as Thailand has recently shown, all that's needed is for the Supreme Court to rule that the last elections were unconstitutional and you can have new elections. What made Thailand's last elections unconstitutional was nowhere near what makes our last elections unconstitutional. The Thais never had a recording of Thaksin talking to an election commissioner demanding to win by a million votes against his rival. Our Supreme Court, which has been on a roll, decrees the last elections unconstitutional, we can have new elections.

Snap elections can happen only if GMA resigns? Not at all. Of course, holding snap elections without GMA presumes removing her from the equation to begin with. That can be done by three things: People Power, civil disobedience, military action. I personally favor the first two. The second is the easiest, quite apart from the most logical thing to do, since it does not ask the public to do anything, it asks them not to do anything. Filipinos should find it the easiest thing in the world not to pay taxes since they don't like paying taxes anyway. Filipinos should find it the easiest thing in the world as well not to behave like good citizens because they don't like being good citizens anyway. Except that in this case, they have every justification for it. Why should anyone want to be a good citizen to a fake president? GMA refuses to go, I refuse to obey.

I've written countless times about why I still believe in Edsa. Edsa never betrayed us, we betrayed Edsa. We did so by believing that after overthrowing a tyrant, we could all go back to where we were and act like battle-scarred veterans. Edsa is not the end, it is the beginning.

I still believe we can mount an Edsa—by having an idea that can inspire the People to reclaim their Power. That is new elections. New elections are not just a thing that can happen after ousting GMA, they are the very thing to oust GMA. They are not just an effect, they are a cause. I've always thought that if the groups opposing GMA had called for snap elections last July, GMA would be gone by now. But no, they called for everything except snap elections, not least snap transitional governments, revolutionary or not, composed by them. Why would people want to take to the streets to install them in power? Might as well stay home and watch the NBA.

As to the Comelec, that too is the easiest thing in the world. All you have to do is prosecute everyone who helped award the computerization program to an illegitimate bidder, and you will revamp that thing completely. All the commissioners then did that: they sat on banc when they awarded the contract to Mega Pacific. If you can force snap elections through an exercise of political will, with everyone from the Supreme Court to the ordinary citizen uniting on that call, you can most certainly force a Truth Commission to come into existence to prosecute everyone who lied, cheated and stole the last elections. And finally, you have a vigilant public, a pentitent Namfrel or an independent body that hasn't been afflicted by the virus that makes people unable to count, and an international group to observe the elections, you can have clean elections.

It can be done, and it's high time we did it.

Relative political calm boosted RP stocks

HAVING MISSED SIX COLUMNS OWING TO A family affair I had to attend to, it was a pleasure to read in this newspaper about how Philippine stocks soared to a seven-year high, buoyed by the spending spree of foreign investors. The Inquirer report attributed the surge to "the country's bright economic prospects, improving government finances, solid corporate earnings, low interest rates and relative political calm." I smiled to myself especially when I read that thing about "relative political calm." So many of us in media have tirelessly cited the importance of political stability in economic recovery and now here's proof of what "relative political calm" can do.

We always hear the assertion that the economic picture is vastly improving, but the political situation remains dismal. Recently a pro-administration leader was quoted as opining that political calm would prevail for some time, inasmuch as the espionage case in the US involving several prominent Filipino opposition leaders would keep them off-balance. That wish may be short-lived. Already a big thing is being made in the press of the allegation that then Vice President Macapagal-Arroyo had plotted to oust President Estrada prior to Edsa II.

The good news about the surge of RP stocks is echoed in many bullish reports on the country's economic and financial outlook in the near and medium term from various investment fund companies. Among them is JP Morgan, which noted that in the past six months, 10-year RP bond yields have plunged by 450 bp to 7 percent, compared to the average increase of 12 bp. While RP's equity market lagged behind those of its neighbors in the region, increasing by 25 percent in US dollar terms compared with the regional average of 33 percent, JP Morgan predicted that RP equities "will soon play catch-up, particularly as we are cautious on Indonesia, Thailand and Malaysia."

JP Morgan also noted that RP is on track to having a balanced budget by 2008 and a surplus in 2009, "thus breaking the cycle of budget deficits that were continually funded by debt." It said that the national debt is targeted to fall from 82 percent of GDP in 2005 to 51 percent by 2010. These targets will be achieved through an improvement in tax collection from a low of 12.4 percent of GDP in 2004, to 16.1 percent in 2008, new tax measures such as the E-VAT, and better tax administration, the investment firm said.

JP Morgan noted the government's efforts to improve tax collection by implementing the lateral attrition law, whereby under-performing revenue and customs officials are dismissed and performers are rewarded, as well as the more determined effort of the Department of Finance to run after smugglers and tax evaders and prosecute them. What's good about having more funds, besides narrowing down the budget deficit that was once feared to lead to an Argentine scenario, is that there'll be more money to spend on infrastructure projects not only to pump-prime the economy but also to make the country more competitive.

I'll tackle next what JP Morgan terms the "four key growth drivers" for the new RP economic cycle: the strong growth in remittances, business process outsourcing (call centers and allied industries), renewed infrastructure spending and the revitalized mining sector.

Several weeks back, I congratulated Southern Leyte Gov. Rosette Leria for the well-deserved praises heaped on her hands-on management of the mudslide tragedy in Barangay Kinsaugon, St. Bernard. The head of the American service group that assisted in the rescue efforts likened her to former New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani in the aftermath of the 9/11 attacks. Unfortunately I had also written that Rosette learned a lot about governance from her "late" father, former Speaker Nicanor Ynguez. But I was quickly informed later that the former speaker is very much alive, and I have since apologized to his family for that error.

However, former Senate President Jovito Salonga did not let that error pass unnoticed. He wrote Ynguez last March 16 that he read about his "demise" from my column and he recalled their days as practicing lawyers and members of Congress. Ynguez wrote Ka Jovy back to say he was moving in his wheelchair in Maasin, after more than two months of being bedridden in Manila. He also congratulated Salonga for his continued active involvement in the political affairs of the country, recalling his offer to mediate the rift within the Liberal Party as evidence of his concern for a more responsible conduct of politics, especially by major political parties. "I know that your experience in Congress will be of great help to the present political leaders," wrote Ynguez.

Legendary playwright, theater director, Magsaysay awardee for media and saintly priest James B. Reuter, S.J., will celebrate his 90th birthday on May 21. He joins that very exclusive club of people 90 years and above, who have remained prodigiously active in the life of our nation (among them is Fr. Pierre Tritz, founder of Erda Foundation, who will turn 92 on Sept. 19). To celebrate Father Reuter's big day, his former students at the Ateneo, who have formed the 2B3C Foundation, will launch a book that will showcase selected plays and other writings of this enduring talent. Because of the big demand for the book, interested parties are urged to place their orders early so that the organizers can arrange for Father Reuter to write a personal dedication. Orders may be made with Jeng at alumni@admu.edu.ph, Sr. Mary Aurelie Cortes at St. Paul University of Manila, Tel. No. 524-5687 to 89, or Kathy Relevance at St. Paul University of Quezon City, Tel. No. 726-7986, loc. 143. Checks should be payable to 2B3C Foundation until May 15.

Incredible mistake re Sally Bulatao

THIS IS ONE CASE THAT TEMPTS ME TO TELL good persons planning to serve in government to please don't. It has nothing to do with the monetary compensation. It is because despite the hard work you put in, you might end up tarred and feathered, with your name irreparably tarnished.

Sure, one could be removed from an appointive position any time and for any number of reasons, loss of confidence among them, but to be given your walking papers and accused of wrongdoing without due process is another matter.

Something terrible has been done to Salvacion Bulatao, head of the National Dairy Authority (NDA) for almost six years. I am hoping that things will be rectified and that those who moved with undue haste will be enlightened and realize that they have made a mistake.

I've known Sally for 25 years and I can vouch for her good character. I can also say that she has been a great mover in the local milk industry, which includes thousands of farmers. Hey, you don't easily find someone so passionate about milk, dairy farmers and the hungry poor. Sally has, in fact, passed on some of that interest in milk to me. An accounting graduate of the College of the Holy Spirit and with a master's degree from Harvard University, Sally could have been somewhere more comfortable.

Removing Sally is not the problem, but destroying her reputation cries to heaven for reparation. Was this a mistake, or was there malice involved?

On May 2, Sally received a letter of dismissal with punitive measures, consisting of a perpetual ban from public office and forfeiture of all financial benefits. On May 4, a press release and press conference announced the dismissal of corrupt officials. The name Salvacion Bulatao was on the list.

President Macapagal-Arroyo who appointed her NDA administrator in 2001 was the same one who approved her walking papers, through Senior Deputy Executive Secretary Waldo Flores.

The charges against her were: (1) "That in hiring a foreign consultant without the benefit of public bidding as required ... you are liable for violating ... the Anti-Graft and Corruption Act." (2) "That you failed to observe the procedures of government procurements when you entered into a memorandum of agreement with McCann Erickson Philippines for the advertisement and promotion of local milk, thereby giving a private party unwarranted benefits or preference in violation of ... RA No. 3019."

HUMAN FACE

Ma. Ceres P. Doyo

Sally said that in 2001, when she was new on the job and eager to get things done, she hired a dairy plant expert, a Thai woman whom she knew well, to inspect and evaluate the state of dairy plants. For this decision, she relied on the advice of agency old-timers. This was needed before the signing of lease purchase agreements between the NDA and cooperatives. For 30 days' work, the fee was a relatively meagre P75,000 minus tax. The result was reduced power consumption and higher milk quality that resulted from the resizing of ice banks, improved piping system, upgraded procedures, etc.

Two NDA engineers and a dairy farmer were then sent to Thailand to study installation projects. These moves generated savings for the government and increased profits for the dairy enterprises.

McCann Erickson did not charge anything for its creative services in 2002. It was all pro bono. Ogilvy & Mather's work was pro bono. What the NDA paid for was the production of promo materials that was couched through the ad agency for friendly rates. The entire package was presented to the NDA board, and the memorandum of agreement covering the transaction was reviewed and recommended for approval by the legal counsel of the Department of Agriculture and cleared by the Commission on Audit in 2003.

When Sally joined the NDA in 2001, she was not a greenhorn in the dairy industry. In 1988, she joined the Philippine Dairy Corp., the NDA's predecessor. After her stint at the PDC, she helped set up the Dairy Foundation of the Philippines with then Agriculture Secretary Carlos Dominguez as board chair. But long, long before all this, Sally had already gotten her feet wet when she worked with the Federation of Free Farmers. Being married to intellectual and activist Gerry Bulatao meant being drawn deeper toward the disadvantaged.

Sally has served four agricultural secretaries. "I have done my part in moving the industry forward," she says. "This stint in government is already longer than I intended... Hence, the announcement of the Office of the President of my dismissal was not totally unwelcome. After all, as a presidential appointee, I serve at her pleasure. However, I must assert that I am not guilty and the punitive measures imposed on me and the adverse publicity about my dismissal are unfair. I earnestly hope that the appropriate corrective steps will be taken. It is only proper to correct a mistake in the interest of recognizing productive and honest public service."

The 9th National Dairy Congress will be held in Cebu City from May 24 to 26. Sally who was present in the past eight congresses will miss this one.

During the term of Sally (2001-2005), the growth of the dairy sector (number of milk animals, production, farmers involved, farmers' earnings) increased more than 20 percent. There are figures to support this.

When renowned Jesuit psychologist Fr. Jaime Bulatao, Gerry and Sally's uncle, learned about the case, he was incredulous. "This is a mistake," he gasped.

Sally who had bravely stood up to her American counterparts to push Philippine interests just had to let her heart break into pieces on this one.

Tell me, is this the way to treat a good and honest public servant?

A unicameralist on bicameralism

JOSE RIZAL ONCE WROTE, "WE MUST COME to our elders for advice. They have seen much and studied more; our years are few and our knowledge scant beside their experience."

The late Jose R. Romero, a former congressman, House majority floor leader, delegate to the Constitution, Convention, sugar lobbyist, secretary of education, lawyer and ambassador, wrote an autobiography entitled, "Not So Long Ago." Every time I read it, I learn something new, and I am reminded of a basic truth that not every politician is a bad person. Romero's account of his life is honest, and illustrates that what we see today had its origins yesterday, and that even at the time, people saw clearly what was at stake. Today's politicians want to bring us backwards, forwards, sideways, with a mixed bag of changes that hark back to all the previous stages of our past. They have no creativity.

I've heard proposals to restore the system of electing senators by district, the way senators were elected under the Jones Law (1916-1935). This idea is, of course, a distraction since what the House really wants is to eliminate the Senate altogether. This happened in 1935, during the framing of the Constitution, but this time, the senators aren't in the mood to have their jobs legislated (or amended) out of existence.

Romero dealt with the issue of senatorial districts in his reminiscences about the role he played in the Constitutional Convention. He wrote, "I was greatly interested in the adoption of the unicameral system of legislature. There was general dissatisfaction with the system of electing senators from the then senatorial districts. Provinces which had very little in common had been lumped together into districts, and there was sometimes an imbalance of resources, making one province dominant over the others. Such was the case of my own senatorial district. My province of Negros Oriental was lumped together with Negros Occidental, distant Antique and still more distant Palawan. It seems as if the district was a hodgepodge of remnants of what could not be taken into other districts. While we were on the same island as Negros Occidental, we were separated by a high mountain ridge, so that the two provinces did not speak the same vernacular. On the other hand, we were separated by water but were closer and had more contacts with Cebu, Bohol and Northern Mindanao than we had with Negros Occidental, and we spoke the same language. Also, Negros Occidental, being the premier sugar province, was so much richer than ours that candidates from our sister province always had much more money to spend in election campaigns and thereby could practically dominate our province politically ... If we had little in common with Negros Occidental, we had very much less in common with Antique and Palawan."

THE LONG VIEW

Of course, his dissatisfaction with the way provinces were lumped together wouldn't hold water anymore. In drawing up the country's different regions, Marcos solved that problem. Romero's old senatorial district would be replaced today by Region 7, composed of Bohol, Cebu, Negros Oriental and Siquijor. He'd probably be happier with this arrangement.

But Romero made other observations about the old system of electing senators at large.

"Senator Briones and Representative [Manuel] Roxas were really in favor of a bicameral legislature with a Senate elected at large, but their strategy was to join the unicameralists in the attack on the then-existing system of electing senators by districts and then afterward to persuade the unicameralists to join them in a movement for a Senate elected at large. Thus, when deliberations on that part of the Constitution dealing with the legislature was about to close after one month of debate, they made their approach to me as the designated leader of the unicameralists' group and made their proposal. I told them that much as I disliked the system of electing senators by district, the system of electing senators at large would be worse. They argued that senators elected at large would be elder statesmen. I told them the senators elected at large would really be only the creatures of the leaders of the parties."

Romero said his misgivings were later proven to be valid. "I was to see an example a quarter of a century later of the truth of my contention when at the Nacionalista convention of 1961, after having been selected by the Executive Committee of the Nacionalista Party as one of the official candidates, Senate President [Amang] Rodriguez insisted on my being replaced by an incumbent senator as a condition for his rapprochement with President [Carlos R.] Garcia, with whom he had been estranged."

But he went on to observe that in retrospect (he wrote his memoirs near the end of his life, and died before he could finish them), maybe the new system had something going for it: "As I have already stated, I was myself an example of the truth of my statement that the senators elected at large would ... not necessarily be the elder statesmen of the country that the proponents expected them to be. But although myself a victim of the system, I can still say that experience has shown there is a good deal to commend the system. Because of the millions of electors involved, as a general rule the better candidates are elected. The influence of money is not decisive in elections at large, whereas if the electorate involved is much smaller, this limited number could more easily be reached by such unwholesome influences as money, personal relations, or even force. In general, the better candidates have better chances of winning elections at large than in local elections."

Romero's words bear reflecting upon as the House attempts to stampede the nation back into the days of his youth.

Out of the box

THE THINGS I OWNED AND KEPT IN COLLEGE WERE packed and arrived in our house two months after I did. They came in huge boxes that were held together by several rolls of packaging tape. My name in big bold letters was written on every side so that if ever the boxes got lost, tampered with or ruined, people would know (although they'd hardly care and God only knows if I'd ever get them back) who owned all the trash and treasures inside them.

It took me a while to open the boxes and reunite with my belongings. When I finally did, four and a half years worth of memories came flooding back and I let myself drown in my emotions. I welcomed the tears that acknowledged a chapter of my life that is over.

When I had freed all of my things from their cramped refuge, I realized that I had kept them out of practicality rather than for sentimental reasons, something I rarely did when I was younger. When I was a child and collecting Sanrio stationery was the fad among fourth graders, I used the ones that I bought for myself and saved those that my friends gave me. I kept the candy wrappers that were left from a one-time trick-or-treat adventure. I refused to throw away stuffed toys ravaged by dust (something I'm allergic to) and old dolls, even the ones whose heads were missing and whose clothes were soiled beyond recognition. I put aside the letters I received in retreats; it didn't matter if some only had "God bless!" written on them, I kept them all the same. Back then, I held on to the smallest things.

One box contained my clothes. I own just enough shirts for last a week or two because I've given away those that have been pushed to the back of my closet and have not seen the light of day for the longest time. Another box held books that I've read many times over and a photo album that hasn't been filled with pictures or mementos of any kind. A huge box contained my bags and my shoes, which were down to only 10 pairs; in frustration over having to clean them and have some of them repaired, I decided to leave most of my footwear, those I could no longer see myself wearing and, could no longer restore, on the doorstep of my old apartment for vendors and laundry women to take. Another box had small boxes inside of it in which watches, sunglasses and beaded jewelry were stored. I've kept just the pieces given by the very few people who are special to me. Unlike when I was younger, now I have no qualms about saying goodbye to stuff that hasn't been used for a long while, that is broken or that has missing parts. Never mind that some of the things I part with had been with me on special occasions, the world didn't stop turning when I bade them goodbye. Besides, I'm ready to make new memories and amass new junk.

The only box whose contents I had difficulty decreasing was the one filled with my college textbooks, photocopied reading materials and papers of all kinds. I didn't want to part with any of my old notes because, who knows, they might be useful someday (i.e., when I apply for and land a job). I don't know if any of the mind-boggling lectures I listened to really have any relevance to the journey ahead, but I like any other new college graduate in this country, I'd save anything that hints of survival in the "real world." Even if the box weighed more than all of the other boxes combined, my dad probably had to pay extra for that, I didn't let go of those materials, hoping they'd somehow help make the future at least a little more conquerable and less terrifying. I realize that though I've changed and I've learned to let go of things, and of people even, I cannot give up my aspirations, and my hope of a bright future. Our government and our economy may be dying, as well as my generation's belief in our country, but I have promised myself to keep my optimism and that is what I will do.

I opened one of my old notebooks and saw doodles I probably wrote out of boredom. Some were pictures of flowers and stars, which are basically the only things I can draw. Some were lists of things I needed to do on a particular day. Some were unfinished verses and thoughts on personal issues. And some were scribbles of my name, in different fonts, with the abbreviation "Arty" at the beginning.

I smiled as I read every page. I recalled old lessons, and my heart was reminded of a dream.

Before April of every year ends, hundreds of students in my old school will march and go up the stage to receive their hard-earned diplomas. I know that most of these students have lived far away from home just to get a good education and will be going back home. Their belongings will be packed in boxes, ready to follow them and remind them of their youthful exploits. While our stories may amuse us and make us yearn for simpler, happier times, I hope that what we will take out of those boxes and never forget are our dreams—for our country and for ourselves—and how we vowed to make them come true.

Give mining a second chance?

A RECENT SURVEY CONDUCTED by the Social Weather Stations revealed that a little more than half of the country believes that mining should be given a chance. (PDI, 4/28/06) Perhaps, the question should have been phrased "Does mining deserve a second chance?"

In another spell of national amnesia, we are forgetting that we already gave mining a chance to employ and enrich the nation. And, for decades, mining companies were allowed to operate and undertake extraction activities across the country, from the Cordilleras to Mindanao. After those long years of mining, which saw many disasters, among them the Marcopper tragedy in Marinduque, the Filipinos are no richer for their troubles.

To this day, abandoned mining sites dot the countryside, most of them conspicuous for their dead rivers, polluted coastal waters, denuded forests and ghost communities. The original inhabitants of those sites found out too late that mining companies would rather import trained workers than equip local residents with the needed skills.

After being given the chance, mining impoverished the country even more. Marinduque is an irrefutable example of mining's ill effects. An island so totally given to mining, it has only become poorer—and worse, poisoned. But despite the experience in Marinduque, the government persists in weaving a fantastic mining tale of riches and prosperity.

The lessons from the Marinduque experience seem to be lost on everyone in the Rapu Rapu mine spill in Aday. Instead of confronting the harsh truths unearthed by an independent commission created to investigate the spill, local officials are accusing its members of being anti-mining.

In its desperate, insatiable drive to rake in more and more money, the Arroyo administration has proposed amendments to the Constitution that would allow 100-percent foreign-owned companies to exploit the country's natural resources and non-Filipinos to own real estate in the Philippines. And the government is diverting public attention from these amendments by focusing the debate on the shift to the parliamentary system and on the conflict between the Senate and the executive branch.

The Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines is right in saying mining per se is not bad, but it should not be allowed for now because of the way it is being done in the country today—poorly monitored and regulated even as it gives foreign interests gross advantage at the expense of Filipinos.

Mining was given a chance but it blew it. Instead of the mining companies suffering for their mistakes, Filipinos are the ones being punished. The people need to be reminded of what mining has cost the country. They should not be fooled by empty promises of wealth.

DILG secretary shows failure of Catholic education

ON HINDSIGHT, I SEE HOW very inadequate and defective was the Catholic education we passed on to Interior Secretary Ronaldo Puno. Maybe he should consider making up for the deficiency by following the examples of great personages in history, like Thomas More, Evelio Javier and Rosa Parks.

As for President Macapagal-Arroyo, like many others, I would like to see her go—that is, step down from the presidency. That is the more practical way to resolve the questions about the legitimacy and morality of her leadership and to achieve national unity.

But quite apart from that, she should also look into and ask what she has achieved with her

(a) Militaristic approach to our insurgency problem in Mindanao and elsewhere.

(b) Economic programs and policies. (Not being an economist, I cannot make an economist's judgment. I go by what my eyes see every day—the rich become richer, the poor, poorer—a human situation which the prophets and Jesus would rail against.)

This is a message for the President and her interior secretary—a message that I would rather not make. But our times demand that we set aside personal feelings, and that we speak up and be counted.

Taiwan seeks to be a partner in world health programs

THE CAUSE OF HEALTH AND sanitation should know no boundaries and no helping hand should be excluded from disease prevention or disaster relief. This is a universally accepted principle.

One of the resolutions adopted by the World Medical Association (WMA) last year reiterated that the health and welfare of the people of Taiwan should no longer be excluded from the international community's pursuit of global health.

In a speech last year, WMA president Dr. Kgosl Letlape warned: If avian flu is transmitted from China to Taiwan, as happened with SARS, there will be no formal channels by which the World Health Organization and Taiwan can exchange technical data and assistance. Clearly, as social leaders, we need to be more vocal and active in ensuring that all necessary measures are adopted to involve all the peoples of the world in preparing for health disasters.

To live up to the expectations of our friends and to heed suggestions here and abroad, we have organized the Taiwan International Health Action (Taiwan IHA) to integrate our domestic medical resources, and to coordinate our health and sanitation initiatives with international cooperative efforts to provide humanitarian medical aid.

Taiwan IHA seeks to establish partnerships with important domestic and international health service and sanitation groups. Taiwan IHA is envisioned to serve as the platform for the nation's active participation in international health and sanitation affairs.

Taiwan is willing to establish medical partnerships with other countries worldwide. Taiwan IHA will spearhead attempts to achieve this goal. As Taiwan works to gain participation in the WHO, these partnerships will naturally merge with our goal of working for global health. We hope that Taiwan IHA will make our nation a true partner for global health.

'TV Patrol' vs '24 Oras': which news program is No. 1?

THIS REFERS TO THE ARTICLE titled, "In Mega Manila, it's still 24 Oras," written by Nini Valera and Bayani San Diego Jr. (PDI, 5/7/06) We would like to clarify some points in the article.

Luchi Cruz-Valdez reportedly claimed that "TV Patrol," on the average, led "24 Oras" in ratings for the month of April in Metro Manila. Valdez, citing the Metro Manila ratings of "TV Patrol" vs. "24 Oras" for the period April 19 to 21 (only), made the conclusion that "TV Patrol" led "24 Oras" for the entire month.

Based on data from AGBNMR, during the entire month of April, "TV Patrol" led "24 Oras" in Metro Manila just for five times and in three of those wins, "TV Patrol" led by less than one rating point. To claim that "TV Patrol" "won" the month on the whole is totally incorrect and irresponsible.

For the month of April, "24 Oras" registered an average of 25.6

points vs. "TV Patrol's" 20.4 points in Mega Manila, and posted an average of 23.5 points vs. "TV Patrol's" 22.3 points in Metro Manila, based on data from AGBNMR.

From May 2 to 4, "24 Oras" even increased its Mega Manila ratings as it beat its rival program by 11 points or more, based on overnight ratings data from AGBNMR. Last May 5, "24 Oras" led "TV Patrol" by almost 8 rating points.

Breaking down Mega Manila ratings into Metro Manila and suburbs has never been a common practice in the industry. GMA Marketing and Productions president Manuel Quiogue said. Very few clients look at the Metro Manila ratings because Mega Manila represents one major market and not a collection of many markets.

While our competitor claims they now have a higher credibility rating, we stand by ratings data to prove that viewers prefer our unbi-

Priests condemn STL as front for 'jueteng,' 'archaic social evil'

LAOAG CITY—PRIESTS IN THE CATHOLIC DIOCESE OF Laoag have condemned the resurgence of "jueteng" in Ilocos Norte, which, they said, is being operated under the protective mantle of the government-run Small Town Lottery (STL).

The priests, through a pastoral letter read in all Catholic parishes in Ilocos Norte on May 7, said "since there was no valid argument for jueteng, this archaic social evil is now called STL."

It was the first occasion that the priests had publicly rebuked the STL even as no local franchise had been approved for its operation.

"As we were contemplating on amending our old and evil ways during Lent, the government was busy contemplating on amending the name and mechanics of an old and tempting evil. And as we were celebrating the resurrection (of the Lord), the government shamelessly took the front pages, gladly announcing the resurgence of a social evil that we all thought has died forever," said the pastoral letter.

While there has been no application for STL franchises, the Ilocos Norte provincial board has started deliberating on a measure supporting the STL's operation.

The board said the lottery would improve the revenues of local government units out of shares derived from bets.

Ilocos Norte mayors are known to be supportive of the state-run gambling. However, not all mayors showed up during a public hearing that Board Member Renato Peralta convened to support the STL measure.

Reports reaching the provincial police showed that collectors have resumed soliciting jueteng bets in nearly all Ilocos Norte towns and this capital city.

Supt. Juan Luna, provincial police director, however, said "the bet collection might be a test run for the STL."

Laoag Mayor Michael Parinas, who had supported the entry of STL, said the bet collection must be stopped if it is intended for jueteng operators.

"STL or jueteng or both, we condemn it. We also condemn the carefree enthusiasm of the government in promoting the STL. We condemn the utter disregard, indifference and silence of our local authorities in allowing the vicious play of shrouding the illegality of jueteng within the legality of STL," the priests said.

The priests reminded authorities that they could stop illegal gambling if they want to, citing past instances when jueteng operations stopped.

In Pangasinan, police suspected that jueteng operators in the province were using the numbers game EZ-2, run by the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office, as a front for illegal gambling.

Eleven collectors, supposedly soliciting bets for EZ-2, were arrested by the police on Tuesday in San Jacinto and Urbiztondo towns and Urdaneta City. Cristina Arsadon and Yolanda Sotelo-Fuertes, PDI Northern Luzon Bureau, and Greg Refraccion, PDI Central Luzon Desk.

Wire thieves nabbed

CABUYAO, Laguna—Police arrested on Saturday 10 suspects, most of them Metro Manila residents, for the theft of telephone wires owned by the Philippine Telegraph and Telephone Company (PT&T). Investigators said a PT&T lineman spotted the suspects cutting the wires at about 11 a.m. in Barangay Mamatid here and immediately reported them to police. The suspects, who have been detained at the Bureau of Jail Management and Penology in Cabuyao, were identified as Michael T. Abiso, Marcelino B. Malones, Ricardo D. Trespedes, Jr., all residents of Parañaque City; Rocky S. Gaianido and Peter P. Badonido of Sampaloc, Manila; Primo S. Bangut, Allan P. Bernal and Bryan P. Bacang of Uugong, Valenzuela City; Milan C. Niempido, of Gentillon, Valenzuela City and Arman S. Sumillo of Quizon City.

Kaogma Festival

CAMARINES SUR Gov. Lray Villafuerte said everything is set for this year's Kaogma Festival, which will be held from May 21 to May 28 as the highlight of the province's 427th foundation day celebration. The Kaogma Festival was started in 1989 to highlight the celebration of Camarines Sur's foundation day and also as a thanksgiving for a bountiful harvest for the year for the province's farmers and fisher folk. "We would like to extend this invitation for this year's Kaogma Festival, which we have billed as the 'hottest festival' in the world," said Villafuerte in a statement. "There will be spicy and delicious food which the province is known for, cultural presentations and sporting events. We will also be showcasing our local products."

Anti-pilferage seminars

TRANSOLCO, formerly the National Power Corp., has conducted anti-pilferage seminars for its employees, especially those who work in the field such as linemen, line foremen, field officers and security personnel. A Transolco press statement said the seminars seek to improve the knowledge and skills of the employees in enforcing the law against stealing or destroying power towers. The seminars were held in Naga, Camarines Sur on April 21, Lipa, Batangas on March 22, and Guimara, Quizon on March 21.

UP prof says no proof of heavy metal in Sorsogon

SORSOGON CITY—The head of the University of the Philippines-Manila (UP-Manila) Department of Pharmacology and Toxicology had assured Sorsogon officials that there is no scientific proof that heavy metals are present in the body of residents of five towns earlier subjected to a study by their group.

The assurance was relayed by Dr. Nelia Cortez-Maramba to Dr. Edgar Garcia, Sorsogon provincial health officer, who called on her at her office to discuss the issue, following reports quoting the UP professor as saying that residents of five Sorsogon towns were positive of heavy metals.

Maramba told the Sorsogon official that she was misquoted by reporters as she had not given the independent commission, which was investigating the Lafayette mining operation, any conclusive testimony when she was summoned to testify.

Garcia said the UP professor's assurance would allay any fears that the report could generate, particularly a possible fish scare it might again cause.

"We must be very careful about this issue as we don't want any repeat of the fish scare which would surely cripple the livelihood of our already poor fishermen," he said.

Garcia was sent to Manila by Gov. Raul Lee to see Maramba so he could clarify the issue. Bobby Q. Labatan, PDI Southern Luzon Bureau

GSIS stops loans to gov't men in Bulacan town

PAOMBONG, BULACAN—THE GOVERNMENT Service Insurance System has suspended the loan privileges of local government employees here after the town failed to pay compulsory premium arrears to the state pension fund.

In a statement, GSIS president and general manager Winston Garcia said the employees would not be able to apply for loans until the arrears were settled or an arrangement for a settlement had been approved by the GSIS.

"We are open to settlements, but [local officials] have to enter into formal and binding agreements with the GSIS that they will settle their obligations," Garcia said.

According to the statement, GSIS senior vice president Felicidad Gutierrez said the suspension of loan privileges of Paombong employees was made effective on April 11 after notices were sent to the town officials.

Mayor Donato Marcos said a reason for the delay in payment of GSIS premiums was the non-payment of rentals and taxes of big fishpond operators in the town.

Marcos said he was surprised when he learned about the suspension of GSIS loan privileges of local government employees because they did not receive any notice from the GSIS. Carmela Reyes, PDI Central Luzon Desk

PNP building 'stronger' stations vs rebs

PAGADIAN CITY—THE SERIES OF SUCCESSFUL attacks of rebels on police stations in many parts of the country has prompted the Philippine National Police to speed up its modernization programs by building "strong" stations.

Police Director Servando Hizon, chief of the PNP's Directorate for Comptrollership, announced that the PNP is building 250 police stations across the country, especially in areas threatened by insurgency.

"All police stations will be provided with their own buildings and will be adequately equipped with all necessary equipment such as short and long firearms, patrol cars, troop carriers as well as communication and investigating facilities," said Hizon, who was here Tuesday for the groundbreaking rites of a P10-million police headquarters at the city hall complex.

In Western Mindanao, a spokesperson of the National Democratic Front claimed that its armed wing, the New People's Army (NPA), had seven successful raids since last year, including the raids on the municipal police station of Sapang Dalaga town in Misamis Occidental.

Hizon on Monday attended the inauguration rites of a newly built P2-million municipal station in Roseller T. Lim town in Zamboanga Sibugay and attended four other groundbreaking ceremonies in the towns of Zamboanga del Norte and Sibugay.

"These projects are aimed at making police stations stronger," Hizon said. Michael Sarcaugo, PDI Mindanao Bureau

Illegal dog trading uncovered in Albay

By Edgar Alejo and Job Belen
Legaspi City

ON MARCH 31, police and officials of the Animal Kingdom Foundation Inc. (AKFI) arrested a dog trader in a buy-bust operation in Tabaco City in Albay.

Semior Insp. Nelson Llaneta, chief of the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group (CIDG) in the province, said Ernesto Arabe, alias Erning "Ayam" (local term for dog), 42, of Purok 2, Barangay Divino Rostro, Tabaco, was arrested at 7:30 a.m. at the old public market on Juan Luna Street, some 300 meters from City Hall and the police station.

Llaneta said at least five dogs were ready to be slaughtered and a dead one was found in the possession of Arabe.

The dogs were confiscated and brought to the city pound in Barangay San Roque for temporary shelter. They were later transferred to the AKFI Rescue Center in Capas, Tarlac.

Greg Quimpo, an AKFI researcher, uncovered the dog trading activities when he posed as a buyer and ordered 10 dogs, one of which was already slaughtered.

Two days earlier, Quimpo left P1,500 as deposit to Arabe and promised to pick up the animals early morning of March 31.

Charged

Arabe was released after police investigation but faced charges of violation of Republic Act No. 8485, or the Animal Welfare Act of 1998. If found guilty, he could face a penalty of P1,000 fine, plus imprisonment of not more than six months, Llaneta said.

POLICE and animal rights advocates rescue these dogs after a buy-bust operation in Tabaco City last March 31.

AKFI president Charles Wartenberg, who was with the raiding team, expressed concern over the animal welfare law, which dog traders have ignored until now.

Wartenberg said they were against the indiscriminate transport of dogs. At least 70 percent of dogs being transported die due to suffocation, he said.

"They (dogs) are not only being transported with tied mouths but more so, placed on board the trucks with narrow iron framing that extremely restrains their movements," Wartenberg said.

40 operations

The AKFI, a charitable organization under the England-based International Wildlife Coalition Trust, is registered with the Animal Welfare Division of the Bureau of Animal Industry. It is engaged in the investigation of illegal dog trading in the country as it seeks to protect the animals from abuse and violence.

So far, it has discovered some 40 dog trading operations all over the country since it was established in 2001.

The CIDG arresting team led by Llaneta was also accompanied by AKFI trustee Alan Whittaker, veterinarian Dr. Winston Samaniego, and officer in charge Susan Llaneta.

At the time of Arabe's arrest, the city government was undertaking a massive dog vaccination in line with its anti-rabies campaign. The vaccination started in Barangay Salvacion.

By Juan Escandor Jr.
Camarines Sur

WITH A HUNDRED thousand pesos gambled on the table by an emerging group of pit bull breeders, two pit bulls fight like gladiators inside a plywood-boxed arena inside a cockpit somewhere in Camarines Sur.

The rule is simple in this new type of game: The canine who gets maimed or is killed, or turns his back on a fight loses while the one that delivers the fatal attack or blow wins.

The combatants use the raw savagery of predators against their own kind, acquired through specialized breeding techniques that involve maintaining body weight and fighting form and adhering to a special diet, which some say, includes steroid injections.

The killer instinct is harnessed in a controlled and regimented environment.

Typically people-friendly, pit bulls become rabidly aggressive against each other in this kind of setup. Unlike fighting cocks armed with blades attached to their spurs to maim and kill, pit bulls use jaw power to sock the neck or throat of their opponents, grab the testicles or break their legs.

Ritualistic

Ostensibly, the dog fight is more "ritualistic" or "ceremonial" than the traditional cockfight.

The pit bulls are presented one after the other. The dog with the lower bet is presented first.

Fighting dogs must be bathed before combat, but they are not required to be present in the arena before the match. The favorite is privileged to be in the arena and wait for its opponent after presentation.

Betting rules are the same as in a cockfight. Outside table betting starts as soon as the favorite is brought in.

There are no fixed rules on fight duration. As long as the pit bulls are still fighting and neither one is running away, the game continues until one dies or the breeder-owner decides to surrender.

A referee calls for a break after 30 seconds of stationary position or situational deadlock, like when both animals lock jaws on each other's heads without moving.

To continue the fight, the dogs are secured to their corners by the two handlers who are allowed to guide them while the fight progresses. The referee counts to 30 to allow the pit bull with the lower bet to make the first charge. Should the dog fail to show a fighting stance and instead act submissively, the referee can

Animal rights activists raise alarm

GREG QUIMPO, AN ANIMAL rights activist, who works as an animal researcher at the Animal Kingdom Foundation Inc., said the dogfight is illegal.

Animal Kingdom is an advocacy group pushing for the enforcement of Republic Act No. 8485 or the Animal Welfare Act of 1998 that protects animals, specifically dogs, from cruelty.

The group has been working with government law enforcement agencies in unraveling the dog trade in Northern Luzon.

Quimpo was alarmed when told of the apparently secretive operation of the pit bull fight that involves big-time gamblers.

Penalties

"The problem is, the law only provides six month imprisonment or payment of a minimum of P1,000 to a maximum of P5,000 penalty to those caught," he said.

Even if the gamblers are caught, they would easily be able to pay the penalty, which is lower than their capital or winnings, he said.

Quimpo added that even as dogfight aficionados claim that the game is likened to boxing to rationalize the use of raw power in the game, the dog has no option but to face death inside the arena, and that constitutes cruelty.

"Dogs should not be procured and submitted to torture. This constitutes a crime punishable by law," he said.

Juan Escandor Jr.

declare its defeat

Fight to death

The dogfight, which many condemn as bloody and inhumane, is a fight-to-death game that is gaining followers in Camarines Sur.

One or two exclusive loose groups of breeders already exist in at least three provinces of Bicol and they have set up networks with regional and national groups of breeders.

The breeders cash in on pit bull breeds with pedigrees of fighters for at least P2,500 for a weaned pup or they can spend P1,500 service fee for a male pit bull breeder to mate with a female breeder.

Maintenance and fight conditioning cost more than those for gamecocks.

IN THE KNOW

Pit Bull

AMERICAN Pit Bull Terriers, Bull and Terrier Dogs, Pit Bull Terriers, or simply pit bulls (Canis familiaris), are medium-sized dogs known for their aggressive demeanor, strength and high pain tolerance. Originally bred for use in dog fights, they are more commonly seen today as companion animals.

With an average life span of 12 years, they can reach a height of 18-22 inches and weight of 30-70 pounds at maturity. They are short, thickly built dogs with powerful square jaws and short, shiny coats. Pit bulls are a controversial dog breed because they can be extremely dangerous, especially when trained as attack or fighting dogs. Defenders of pit bulls have maintained that these dogs are no more dangerous than other large dog breeds, and that this nasty reputation is due to irresponsible owners.

However, the animals are generally not recommended as pets for novice dog owners.

As athletic and energetic dogs, pit bulls need exercise frequently. Early training is also a must.

was recorded at magnitude 3 in Ormoc's city center and 4.2 in Barangay Tongonan nearer its epicenter.

Quake's epicenter

The quake was caused by a movement of a geological abnormality in the Philippine Fault that is straddled by Leyte island, Phivolcs said.

The institute said the earthquake was land-based, with no tsunami expected.

The fault was blamed for a massive landslide on Feb. 17 that buried the village of Guinsaugon in Southern Leyte, killing about 1,000 people. A 2.6-magnitude quake hit Southern Leyte just before the landslide.

'Ring of fire'

The Philippines is part of the Pacific "Ring of Fire," where earthquakes and volcanic activities are frequent.

The quake blacked out Cebu City, the country's No. 2 metropolis, Leyte and Samar islands, and also affected large areas of Cebu, Negros, Bohol and Panay islands.

Geothermal plants

The country's major geothermal plants in Leyte supply much of the energy to the six islands which are interconnected by submarine cable in the Visayas power grid.

The grid's main power supplier are generation plants located in Barangay Tongonan which account for 45 percent of overall generation capacity.

Officials said power was cut off as a safety precaution but was restored in some areas at around 1 p.m. Power returned to the rest of the region at about 6 p.m. yesterday.

Automatic shutdown

"For earthquakes with magnitude of 3.5 or higher, the [government] shuts down its plants as a precautionary measure," said Glen Rabonza, administrator of the Office of Civil Defense.

and secondarily only to their clients," Panganiban said.

"Worse, they have jumbled up the hierarchy of their responsibilities to mean their interests first, the interests of their clients second, and the interest of justice a far third."

Ethical compass

Panganiban stressed the need for all lawyers to strictly adhere to the Canons of Professional Responsibility.

He reminded them of the constant exhortations of the late Justice Jose B. Reyes for lawyers to "keep their souls attuned to the demands of morality and honor, since a just cause cannot be protected or defended by dishonorable means."

"Indeed, an ethical compass is required of those who wish to reach the pinnacle of this noble vocation," Panganiban said.

"Quality justice always begins with ethics. Without sound and firm ethical moorings to anchor the profession, attorneys are bound to drift in a vast sea of professional uncertainty and even of personal degeneracy."

46 judges fired

Court records from 1999 to 2005 show that 28 lawyers had been disbarred for various offenses, 169 suspended, 63 reprimanded, 60 admonished, five censured and 10 warned.

During the same period, the high court also dismissed 46 judges from the service and suspended 41 others for various violations.

In his speech, Panganiban praised the bar topnotchers led by 25-year-old Joan de Venecia of the University of the Philippines.

Service from one of the three power plants has been restored and power was expected to be back across the central islands before the end of Wednesday, Ortiz said.

"Maybe some power lines moved, causing the power outage, but the earthquake was not powerful enough to expect damage," said Phivolcs's Ric Mangao.

Powerful enough

But, according to Alberto Dangaso, the Ormoc-based principal engineer of Transco, the quake was powerful enough to disturb the system, causing the tripping of a power generation plant of the California Energy Corp., an independent power producer, and Leyte geothermal power plant of National Power Corp.

The two plants located in Tongonan supply the power needs of the entire Visayas region. The CEC has a capacity of 525 megawatts while the Napocor plant has 105 megawatts.

Moses Red, Napocor-Visayas corporate staff specialist, said that immediately after the power supply from Leyte was cut off, all the power generation plants operated by Napocor in Cebu, Negros, Panay and Bohol also automatically shut down.

Intensity 3 earthquakes are classified by Phivolcs as "weak." People can feel them indoors, particularly on the upper floors of a building.

'Moderately strong'

Intensity 4 earthquakes are classified as "moderately strong," and are felt by most people indoors and outdoors and can even rouse those who are asleep.

Two other earthquakes hit Ormoc earlier this year, a 3.3-magnitude quake on March 22 and a 2.4-magnitude tremor on March 9.

The blackout disrupted work and commercial activities in many offices and business establishments across the Visayas, the cost of which has yet to be quantified.

Cebu offices close

In Metro Cebu, the blackout forced government, including the courts, and many private offices to close at noon.

Traffic was disrupted with traffic lights out. Residents flocked to the malls, straining the latter's air-conditioning systems which were operating with power generators.

Hotels and resorts suddenly experienced a surge in occupancy as residents tried to escape the heat. Reports from Blanche S. Rivera, Abigail L. Ho and LJ Pasion, Metro Manila; and Joey Gabieta, Jhunnex Napalacan, Vicente Labro, Jani Arnaiz, Carla Gomez and Irene R. Sino Cruz, PDI Visayas Bureau, with AP and AFP.

Solon's wife loses car to thieves in Quezon City

By DJ Yap

THE WIFE OF PANGASINAN REP AMADO ESPINO JR. became the latest carjacking victim in Quezon City when car thieves took her Nissan Pajero at gunpoint the other night.

Driver Cesar Elevazo, 46, said he had parked the vehicle owned by Pricilla Ignacio-Espino in front of Star drugstore along Visayas Avenue at 9:30 p.m.

where he had gone to buy medicines.

When Elevazo returned to the car, three armed men came by and ordered him to get out of the vehicle, according to PO2 Kristo John Ramirez of the Quezon City police's anticarjacking unit.

One of the suspects then got on the driver's seat, while the others forced him into the back seat, Elevazo told police. Ignacio-Espino was not in the vehicle, a 2005 model with plate number XRZ-620, at the time of the incident, police said.

The suspects drove around for a few minutes before they let the driver out in Barangay Baesa where the suspects left him. Elevazo said he could not remember the suspects' faces, as well as the make and type of their short firearms.

Ramirez said Elevazo was asked to look at photos and artists' sketches of suspected car thieves, but he was unable to identify anyone in the lineup.

Unauthorized download to cell a crime

NBI raids 8 cell phone store branches for copyright infringement

By Margaux C. Ortiz and Kenneth del Rosario

DOWNLOADING SONGS TO CELL PHONES without the permission of record companies is a crime.

The National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) issued this warning yesterday following a raid on eight branches of a store offering downloading services for a fee.

Simultaneous raids were conducted at Wellcom Telecom Supermarket Inc. branches in SM Southmall, SM Fairview, SM North Edsa, SM Manila, SM Pampanga, SM Cebu, SM Iloilo and Glorietta Mall in Makati City, according to NBI Intellectual Property Rights Division (IPRD) chief Jose Justo Yap.

Yap said four major record companies, Sony BMG Music Entertainment Phils. Inc., EMI Phils. Inc., Warner Music Phils. Inc. and MCA Records Inc., had complained of copyright infringement by Wellcom.

"The record companies (said) they lost billions of pesos in profits annually because of illegal downloading," Yap said.

Lawyers of the record firms sought the bureau's help in putting a stop to alleged unauthorized reproduction, downloading, and copying of MP3 songs and videos.

NBI IPRD senior agent Joel Tovera said the lawyers, posing as Wellcom customers, were offered MP3 and MP4 capable cell phones. Buying the units, the employees allegedly said, would entitle customers to "downloading privileges" for a fee of P20 per song or video.

NBI agents discovered that Wellcom also required customers to pay a monthly fee of P600 "to enjoy downloading privileges."

Tovera said, "The act of downloading songs from a computer into a cell phone without consent from owners constitutes copyright infringement." With 32 search warrants issued by Manila Regional Trial Court Branch 24 Judge Antonio Eugenio, the agents seized nine computers and several accessories from the store branches.

Tovera said the agents also got lists of songs available for downloading. "About 90 percent of all copyrighted songs belong to the four companies," Tovera said.

Tovera said Wellcom violated the Intellectual Property Code by offering to copy songs or music videos to mobile phones. But sales manager Elizabeth Ordeh said the downloading was a "free service" to customers.

NBI AGENTS raided a branch of Wellcom Telecom Supermarket Inc. in Quezon City yesterday for allegedly offering to its customers download of MP3 songs and videos of known local and foreign artists.

Police to tap school organizations in anticrime drive

By Jocelyn R. Uy

THE POLICE WILL HAVE NEW PARTNERS IN fighting street crimes when schools open next month.

The National Capital Region Police Office (NCRPO) is seeking the assistance of different student organizations in high schools and colleges in preventing petty crimes committed against students.

Metro Manila Police chief Vidal Querol said the organizations would be provided with police volunteer identification cards containing numbers to call to report crimes.

Volunteers would also be encouraged to use their mobile phones to document such crimes as snatching, theft and robbery.

Meanwhile, policemen with spy cameras and advance communication equipment would keep a watchful eye every day on the more than 500 public and private schools in Metro Manila when classes start in June, Querol said.

He said the use of cameras would help record evidence and aid policemen in arresting culprits.

"Our major concern is how to prevent students from falling prey to kidnapping syndicates," he told the Inquirer yesterday.

To prevent kidnapping, patrolmen will be dispatched to schools from 5 a.m.

"Once students are ... in their classrooms, the policemen will shift their attention to banks and the marketplace. Early in the afternoon, they will make the rounds of malls, where students are likely to hang out," he said.

Policemen would return to the schools before the end of classes in the afternoon, he said.

The NCRPO will meet with school security managers to synchronize security measures in schools with the police's crime prevention efforts.

"We ask all school administrators to include in their orientation of new students, especially those coming from the provinces, not only administrative matters but also safety tips," Querol said.

The Metro Manila police chief said victims of holdup and cell phone thefts were mostly freshmen coming from the provinces.

Some 6,000 policemen would be deployed across the metropolis to ensure peaceful and orderly opening of classes, he added.

LAWYER Bonifacio Alentani shows copy of complaint filed by four contractors against Caloocan Mayor Enrico Echiverri and city treasurer Lourdes Jose. JOAN BONDO

Caloocan mayor charged with graft

By Nelson F. Flores and Nancy C. Carvajal

GRAFT CHARGES WERE FILED YESTERDAY AGAINST Caloocan City Mayor Enrico Echiverri in the Office of the Ombudsman.

The case arose from the mayor's alleged attempt to solicit money from an entrepreneur doing business with the city government.

In his four-page complaint, Luisito Rivera said Echiverri violated Section 3 of Republic Act 3019 (the Anti-Graft and Corrupt Practices Act) by demanding a "50 percent" share in the more than P9.2 million the city government owed him for services rendered.

Echiverri denied the charges. Rivera's contract was reportedly with the administration of former Mayor Rey Malonzo.

Three other service companies that had contracts with the former city administration also claimed Caloocan was withholding payments due them.

Tiger Construction is trying to collect P13.9 million; Atlantic Erectors, P2.8 million; and Speed Securities and Services, P2.4 million.

Rivera said his Rap-Rap Trucking Services had been distributing water to several water-short Caloocan barangays since 2002. He said his contract with the city government was extended until the month of June 2004.

Rivera added "between...February (and) May 2004, he complied with his obligations and made the appropriate water deliveries to the city and its constituents.

The deliveries were acknowledged, certified and approved for payment."

However, Rivera claimed Echiverri "feloniously and criminally refused to pay" for his services. "Worse, Echiverri demanded 50 percent of my collectibles before payment could be made," Rivera alleged.

He noted that other firms that were similarly situated had already paid.

"I refused to comply with his immoral and felonious demand because I already lost substantial amount of my investments due to the long and unreasonable delay of the said payment," Rivera said. Included in Rivera's complaint was city treasurer Lourdes Jose.

In a statement, Echiverri said the accusations were unfounded. "I never asked money from them and had never met them," he said. The mayor added that the payments for Tiger Construction worth P13.9 million; Atlantic Erectors, P2.8 million and Speed, P2.4 million, were still under review by the city treasurer's office.

"We have to scrutinize the validity of their contracts before I could approve their payments," he said.

"It's taxpayers' money," he added. "I could not just authorize the payment without first verifying the contract which could be disadvantageous to the city government."

Echiverri did not say when the account review would end, but said it was "a smear campaign by my political rivals who, as early as today, are already gearing for the 2007 elections."

Elderly couple dead in Parañaque fire

By Jocelyn R. Uy

AN ELDERLY COUPLE DIED AFTER A TWO-hour fire razed their house in a posh subdivision in Parañaque City early yesterday morning. Firefighters in Manila were also kept busy as four fires broke out in different areas of the city one after the other.

Fire investigators in Parañaque identified the fatalities as Mario Ramos and his wife, Chit, both said to be in their 70s, according to fire officials.

The couple tried to escape their burning house on Don Benito Hernandez Street, Governor Santos Avenue in BF Homes Phase III, but failed to do so because of the steel grill framing their windows, said Insp. Rodrigo Capucan, chief of the City Fire Intelligence and Investigation Unit.

Fire investigators have yet to determine the cause of the fire that reached the second alarm before it was put out at 8:22 a.m. Supt. Leonides Perez, city fire marshal, pegged the damage at P1 million.

In Manila, arson investigators said the first fire broke out at 10:33 a.m. on Luchan Street, Paco, in Manila where 100 houses were burned to the ground. Even while the first fire was going on, another fire hit G. Tuszon and S. Trinidad St., Sampaloc at 12 noon. At around the same time, another fire started at San Nicolas and Elcano Streets, Binondo.

Fire trucks were on their way back to the stations after the Sampaloc and Binondo fires were declared under control before 2 p.m. when another fire alarm sounded.

The fourth fire on Roman Soler Street, Binondo began at 2:39 p.m. Firefighters declared a fire out at 4:39 p.m. With Mailelle Montayre

So, what's wrong with being a Red in one's youth?

PARTY-LIST REP SATUR Ocampo's reminder to Presidential Chief of Staff Michael Defensor about his past is an indirect confirmation that Ocampo has not yet renounced armed struggle against the government.

He may be a parliamentarian but Ocampo, who represents the leftist Bayan Muna party, still believes in the violent overthrow of the government.

Ocampo was reacting to Defensor's offer of legal help for him and the rest of the "Batasan 5" congressmen on condition that they renounce the armed struggle being waged by the Communist Party of the Philippines and its armed unit, the New People's Army (NPA).

The Bayan Muna representative said to Defensor: "Remember your roots."

It was an apparent reference to Defensor's membership in the militant group Kabataang Makabayan when he was in college.

It was a non sequitur. Many leaders in government were attracted to communism in their college days.

ON TARGET
Ramon Tulfo

Among them was Rigoberto Tiglao, former chief of staff and now ambassador to Greece.

Another former top government official who was an out-and-out communist in his youth was Ruben Torres, former labor secretary and executive secretary during the administration of President Ramos. Torres was a member of the Partido Komunista ng Pilipinas (PKP).

So, what's wrong with embracing communism in one's youth? Communism's utopian ideals appeal to the youth.

Youthful idealism is replaced by practical considerations.

Communism's advocacy of armed struggle as a way of changing the system loses its appeal as the youth becomes a responsible, peace-loving adult.

There's another way to change the system and that is to fight it on its own turf—through peaceful means.

Padlocked beerhouses

SEVEN beerhouses were closed down in Muntinlupa City for violating a city ordinance containing the 200-meter proximity rule which prohibits these establishments from operating near schools, churches, hospitals, police stations and government offices. Gary Llamas, chief of the Business Permits and Licensing Office (BPLO), said three bars in Barangay Tunasan and four in Barangay Putatan were also padlocked for violating the "no table" policy which bans employees from entertaining their customers. The BPLO had recently met with 39 club owners in the city to remind them about the other provisions of the ordinance such as the ban on staging lewd shows and the use of skimpy attire outside the club to entice prospective customers. US won't reply to Iran president's letter

WASHINGTON—THE UNITED STATES said Tuesday it would make no formal response to a surprise letter sent by Iran's hard-line leader, but President George W. Bush vowed to pursue diplomatic efforts to counter Iran's nuclear program.

As Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad arrived in Indonesia, during which he could ask Jakarta to mediate in the nuclear row, Tehran said it was waiting for a reply to his 18-page letter to Bush.

But the White House insisted there would be no response on top of comments already made by Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice, who said it contained "nothing new" that offered hope of resolving the nuclear dispute.

Although a New York meeting Tuesday of foreign ministers from the world's six major powers failed to agree on how to tackle Tehran, Rice said: "The international community is united that there must be a strong message to Iran through the Security Council that their behavior to date is unacceptable." International oil prices edged up again following the US rejection of the letter.

Iran has refused to meet international demands to end its uranium enrichment work, which Washington and its allies believe hides a nuclear weapons drive. Tehran insists its research is for peaceful purposes.

The United States, Britain and France want a resolution under Chapter 7 of the UN Charter, which would probably start with a warning to Iran that could be followed up with economic sanctions and even military action.

But China and Russia have spoken out strongly against coercive measures, with Russian Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov reaffirming the divide on Tuesday.

"Our position is very firm. We think that at this stage there is no necessity to discuss Chapter 7," Lavrov was quoted as saying by Russia's Interfax news agency.

German Foreign Minister Frank-Walter Steinmeier, who was at the New York meeting, said the process of agreeing a UN resolution on Iran could take up to two more weeks.

Bush said that even China and Russia agreed that Iran must not be allowed to have a bomb, but that he was determined to seek a negotiated settlement rather than launching more coercive measures.

"The first option and the most important option is diplomacy," he said during an appearance in Florida when asked about the Iran dispute by a member of the public.

The letter from Ahmadinejad was the first from an Iranian leader to a US president in more than a quarter century, and called for "new ways" to settle long-running tensions that have reached a new peak over the nuclear dispute.

Tehran portrayed the letter as an important diplomatic initiative, but US officials dismissed the document as more philosophical treatise than political overture.

In the letter, Ahmadinejad assailed the United States over Iraq, its reaction to the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks, the handling of "war on terror" detainees and even US policy in Latin America.

He suggested that the two countries return to religious principles as a means of restoring confidence. "Will you not accept this invitation?" asked Ahmadinejad in the letter.

"There is nothing in this letter that in any way addresses any of the issues really that are on the table in the international community," Rice said.

BPI Family Savings Bank Conferred Two Prestigious Awards

BPI Family Savings Bank was recently awarded by the Home Guaranty Corporation (HGC) with two awards: Longtime Partner in Home Financing (Thrift Bank Category) and Biggest Volume of Outstanding Guaranteed Housing Loans (Thrift Bank Category).

Receiving the awards in behalf of BPI Family Savings Bank is BPI EVP Gil Buenaventura. The awards were presented by Vice-President Noli de Castro.

One of the necessities every Filipino should have is shelter. However, the hard times have made it difficult for them to meet everyday needs, much less have their own home. As the country's population continues to increase every year, providing basic needs like food, clothing and shelter becomes a struggle.

Making this reality as the inspiration to provide a better life for Filipinos, BPI Family Savings Bank takes on its mission to give people a chance to make their dreams come true. During Home Guaranty Corporation's (HGC) 6th Charter Day Celebration, BPI Family Savings Bank was given two awards by HGC for Providing the Biggest Volume of Outstanding Guaranteed Cumulative for Ten Years which amounted to P3.58, and for being a Longtime Partner in Home Financing which started in 1986. The awards were presented by Vice-President Noli de Castro.

BPI FAMILY SAVINGS BANK

CONFERRED TWO PRESTIGIOUS AWARDS

HGC also cited BPI Family Savings Bank among its distinguished partners. As part of the bank's effort to assist HGC, the institution has been able to provide risk guarantee and fiscal incentives for housing credits. Also during the event, HGC Executives and BPI EVP, Gil Buenaventura performed the symbolic Bolt-In ceremony to signify the strengthening of the continued partnership between HGC and BPI.

BPI Family Savings Bank, true to being the Filipino Family's partner in making goals more attainable, has developed various services that have been instrumental in giving equal opportunity for people to own their dream homes. BPI Family Savings Bank is grateful for the HGC's recognition, as its goal is to help provide a home for every Filipino.

Under the Build your Dream Housing Loan, clients can apply for financing of house acquisition, purchase of lots, townhouse or residential condominium, house construction, home improvement, business expansion. The Build Your Dream Housing Loan may also be used as a multi-purpose loan or to refinance an existing loan with other banks.

Aside from offering the Build your Dream Housing Loan, BPI Family Savings Bank has also partnered with other institutions to provide support to the National Shelter Program of the government.

Nepal king's ordinances scrapped

KATMANDU—Nepal's new government is scrapping some ordinances imposed by King Gyanendra after he seized direct power last year, but there are complications in lifting anti-terrorism laws, a senior official said Wednesday. The Cabinet decided Tuesday to invalidate several laws enacted after Feb. 1, 2005, when the king dismissed the government and formed a new one under his leadership. However, the government has not dropped an antiterrorist ordinance under which several hundred people were charged and jailed, suspected of being communist rebels or having links to them. AP

Ex-commie may become Italy's president

ROME—Italy's incoming government is set to elect the country's first farmer communist president on Wednesday in the face of opposition from most of Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi's conservative bloc. Prime minister-in-waiting Romano Prodi has vowed to ram through his candidate, Giorgio Napolitano, after two days of wrangling and inconclusive ballots. Winning the vote is vital for Prodi to show his leftist coalition can govern with the smallest majority in post-war Italy.

German cannibal gets life sentence

FRANKFURT—A self-confessed German cannibal was jailed for life on Tuesday after a court found him guilty of murder for killing and partly eating an allegedly willing victim he had met on the Internet. At a retrial, the court in Frankfurt found that Armin Meiwes, known as the "Cannibal of Rotenburg," slaughtered a man to satisfy his dark sexual urges. Judge Klaus Drascher described Meiwes, who sliced off his victim's penis while he was still conscious so they could eat it together, as "psychologically ill" but said he was responsible for his actions. AP

UNITED NATIONS—THE UN General Assembly elected Cuba, China and Saudi Arabia to the new Human Rights Council on Tuesday, putting notorious abusers on a panel created to replace its discredited predecessor.

U.S. Ambassador John Bolton de-

from the previous commission may well now still be carried over, as we sadly predicted when we voted against this resolution." The United States long criticized the previous commission, saying it was ineffective and loaded with abusers such as China, Cuba, Sudan and Zimbabwe.

The US Ambassador John Bolton decried the inclusion of Cuba to the council and said it proved that Washington's concerns about the new panel, which it voted against, were justified.

"What a joy," Bolton said sarcastically of Havana's election. "That simply says that the deficiencies from the previous commission may well now still be carried over, as we sadly predicted when we voted against this resolution." The United States long criticized the previous commission, saying it was ineffective and loaded with abusers such as China, Cuba, Sudan and Zimbabwe.

The US was among four countries that voted in March against the revamped council, on the grounds that it would be too easy for human rights violators to be elected.

Cuba, for its part, hailed its election to the Human Rights Council as a "resounding victory" for the communist regime and a "defeat" for the United States.

"The United States failed in its goal of preventing Cuba from getting a seat in the most important panel specialized in human rights in the United Nations," Cuba's foreign ministry said in Havana.

The 191-member General Assembly, voting by secret ballot, also elected Russia and Tunisia to the new 47-member council, adding two other countries whose records have been criticized by rights groups. Countries needed at least 96 votes to win a slot.

Laguna archer bags 4 golds

By Marc Anthony Reyes

NAGA CITY—BACKYARD ARCHER Janet De Leon Bermas of Calabarzon swept all four golds she had set her eyes on even as a fisherman's son from Central Visayas sank one more record in track and field yesterday halfway through the Palarong Pambansa at the Metro Naga Sports Complex.

Accomplishing what her elder brothers failed to do, the 14-year-old Bermas ruled the girls' standard round, 50-meter, 30-meter and the Olympic round to become the most bemedalled athlete thus far in the week-long competitions among more than 6,000 public school students.

An incoming senior at the Makiling National High School, Bermas trained for the Palaro in a wind-swept basketball court of her school in Calamba, Laguna. Her siblings, all archers, failed to compete in the Palaro when the meet was scrapped in 2001 and 2004.

"We trained in strong winds," said Bermas in Filipino. "Today's wind is almost similar to the conditions we have back home."

Meanwhile, Central Visayas' Jorge Pinanonang emerged the hurdles king after re-writing the secondary boys' 400m hurdles record with a time of 55.7 seconds.

Second-placer Rongge Abing of the National Capital Region and third-placer Joemelo Estocado of Bicol Region also bettered the old 57.1 mark of Marion Arlos of Western Visayas set in 2005 in Iloilo City. Abing clocked 55.8 seconds and Estocado 56.7.

The 17-year-old Pinanonang, who comes from the coastal town of Bayawan, Negros Oriental, was leading by more than 10 meters when he

Larios fight Pacquiao gift to Filipinos

FILIPINO RING IDOL MANNY PACQUIAO yesterday said his coming bout against Mexican Oscar Larios on July 2 at the Araneta Coliseum is a gift to his countless fans.

"Fighting Larios is my gift to my countrymen for the devotion and respect they have given me and my family during my boxing career," said Pacquiao from his hometown in GenSan Monday.

Pacquiao will fly to California on Saturday to train at the Wild Card gym in Hollywood.

Now financially secured, Pacquiao said money takes a backseat against Larios.

"I am not fighting anybody for money. I am returning a favor to you all," said Pacquiao.

Pacquiao's 'gift to the Filipinos' fight is to be handled by his own outfit, MP (Manny Pacquiao) Promotions, in collaboration with ABS-CBN Broadcasting Corp.

Called the Mano-A-Mano, Philippines vs Mexico showdown, the fight is being handled as a boxing event fought by Filipinos, promoted by a Filipino and broadcast by Filipinos as an affirmation of the Filipinos' world-class competence.

"Filipinos can watch the match live wherever they may be in the world," said an ABC-CBN spokesperson, who added the bouts could be seen through The Filipino Channel (TFC), INDemand, Direct TV and the network's Mexican broadcast partner.

After 11 years of fighting which included blockbuster bouts against Erik Morales and Marco Antonio Barrera, Pacquiao is undoubtedly the country's richest sportsman.

Davao, MPL enter semis

SAN CARLOS CITY—MUNTINLUPA-PARANAGUE-LAS PILAS, drawing another sterling performance from striker Cristina de los Reyes, blanked Cagayan de Oro-Misamis Oriental, 4-0, yesterday and joined Davao in the semifinals of the PFF National Under-17 Girls' Football Champions at the SJRI fields here.

A day after lifting MPL to a 2-1 win over Rizal with her second-half strike, De los Reyes scored two brilliant goals that thwarted the Cagayan booters, who were looking forward to another upset after stunning Negros Occidental, 1-0, Tuesday.

De los Reyes broke the ice in the 5th minute with a low shot just inside the box after losing two defenders with her blistering run from the half-line.

She struck anew in the 21st minute, getting a nifty feed from 20 yards out and rolling the ball to the right of the goal to seal the second victory that gave MPL the top spot in Group C of this tournament supported by Red Ribbon, Petron and 2Go and Sports Plus Channel of Solar Sports.

With De los Reyes posing as a bigger threat, attacking midfielder Jessica Ryon was given more room to operate and she was rewarded with an 8th minute goal from long range, before Isabel Kilayko got into the scoring fray two minutes later.

Earlier, Davao pounced on Cebu's shaky defense to come away with a 3-1 victory that saw the Cebuans blow two penalty kicks that would have swayed the momentum to their side.

The victory wrapped up the top spot in Group A for the Davaoefas, who are finally playing true to form after their opening-day draw against Bukidnon.

Group B co-leaders Iloilo and Negros Oriental, which battled to a 2-2 standoff Tuesday, are playing separate rivals at press time.

Eryn Mae Salgado's right-footed rocket from the edge of the penalty box in the eighth minute pushed Davao ahead, just two minutes after Cebu skipper Gabi Mercado sent her spot kick wide off the post.

Ailing Giants stop Express

By Musong R. Castillo

A WALKING WOUNDED PUREFOODS SIDE ROLLED TO A FIFTH straight win at the expense of Air21 last night, denying the Express the chance to start a new era on a positive note while inching closer toward an outright semifinal seat in the Gran Matador-PBA Philippine Cup.

The Chunkee Giants bailed themselves out with triples at crunchtime in the fourth period and went on to post a 93-86 victory in wire-to-wire style, but not after losing a key figure in the offensive rotation because of an injury at the Araneta Coliseum.

"I refuse to look at my injured players and have that excuse to lose," coach Ryan Gregorio said. "We're down to eight men, not all of them healthy, but I told the players that it's still 5-on-5 on the court at any given time."

Jun Limpot hit a layup barely a minute on the floor in the first quarter and had to be helped out because of a severe right ankle sprain. He is now listed as doubtful along with Eugene Tejada (ankle), Noy Castillo (calf) and Jordan Salvador, who is out for the rest of the season with an ACL tear.

Fact is, Purefoods is enjoying its longest winning streak of five games under Gregorio with starting power forward Marc Pingris nursing a bruised shoulder and relief point guard Paul Artadi playing with a bad back.

Air21 played its first game without its ex-cornerstone of four years, shooter Ren-Ren Ritualo, who was shipped to Talk 'N Text as part of a blockbuster six-player deal among three teams on Monday night.

But instead of just rolling over and dying with their only legitimate outside threat gone, the Express fought hard and gave the Giants a scare, though it was not enough to mark a new beginning for the struggling franchise.

Purefoods led all the way, establishing leads of as many as 12 points early before the enemy moved within one a couple of times, the last at 60-61 after Stephen Padilla, recalled back to the pros from Cebu, hit a three-pointer near the end of the third period.

James Yap led the Giants with 22 points, including two triples in the fourth quarter.

PUREFOODS 93—J. Yap 22, Raymundo 21, Evangelista 14, R. Yap 13, Artadi 5, Yee 6, Simon 5, Pingris 4, Limpot 2.

AIR21 86—Tubid 18, R. De Ocampo 16, Canalela 11, Telan 9, Armento 8, Padilla 7, Y. De Ocampo 7, Arboleda 7, Dacia 3.

Quarters: 25-17, 47-39, 64-60, 93-86

KERBY Raymundo and James Yap leave the fight for possession to a Purefoods teammate and two Air21 defenders.

PCHS tossers overwhelm Roosevelt; St. Francis wins

PHILIPPINE CULTURAL HIGH School bested Roosevelt College-Marikina, 25-13, 28-26, 25-21, Tuesday in the Shakey's Girls Volleyball Invitational League at the Ate-neo Gym.

Rebounding from a loss last week, St. Francis of Assisi Bacoar beat Holy Family School, 25-11, 25-17, while Colegio San Agustin continued its rise with a 25-15, 25-19 victory over University of Perpetual Help Molino.

UST hurdled MGC-New Life Academy, 25-15, 25-19, while St. Jude notched its first win over Mater Ecclesiae Laguna 25-22, 25-19.

Supporting Shakey's in this 22-school member GVI-League are Dunkin Donuts, Toby's Sports, Mikasa, Asics and Air Philippines, which will fly the Bacolod, Iloilo and Cebu Champions to Manila for the Shakey's Tournament of Champions on June 1, 2 and 3.

Samsung Am Tour goes to Summit Point

Who said De La Hoya is old?

MUHAMMAD ALI WAS 33 YEARS OLD when he stopped Joe Frazier in the "Thrilla in Manila" on Oct. 1, 1975.

Oscar De La Hoya was also 33 years old when he stopped Ricardo Mayorga on Sunday (May 7) at the MGM Grand in Las Vegas, Nevada.

So who said a boxer is old when he is 33?

Bernard Hopkins was 40ish when he knocked De La Hoya out in the 9th round with a devastating body punch in September 2004. This came after Hopkins inflicted on Felix Trinidad a devastating knockout that forced the famous Puerto Rican to retire prematurely.

In the "Thrilla in Manila," Ali won by TKO when Frazier did not answer the bell for the 14th round. In those days, every world title fight was set for 15 rounds.

In the May 7 "Danger Zone" fight, De La Hoya knocked out Mayorga in the 6th with punches so numerous you need an adding machine to tabulate them correctly with the aid of slow-mo.

When the end came, Prazier had a face so grossly even his own mother wouldn't have recognized him. When he had dinner at The Hyatt hours after the fight, Prazier wore aviator sunglasses to hide swollen cheeks, puffy eyes and black eyes.

I was there, so I know.

Still, after dinner, Frazier found time to camouflage the hurt and pain by belting out rock n' roll songs at the hotel bar accompanied by his own band

SPECTATOR

Al S. Mendoza

apty called The Knockouts.

I was there, so I know.

Mayorga was lucky the referee peeled De La Hoya away from him at 1.25 of the 6th when De La Hoya was pouring it on. Otherwise, Mayorga's face would have been horribly rearranged considering De La Hoya's penchant to unleash machuregum shots when given the slightest of openings.

I can understand the viciousness this day of De La Hoya, who, in winning his 7th world crown, was seething with anger from the first bell in lieu of Mayorga's insult of De La Hoya's family and courage before the fight.

Minutes after the victory, De La Hoya approached Mayorga and told The Matador: "I forgive you for the insult you did to me. I'm sure the people have also forgiven you."

It came from the man who won his 28th world title fight, improving his record to 38-4 with 30 knockouts as he grabbed the WBC's 154-pound title from Mayorga, whom De La Hoya decked with a left hook right in the first minute of the first round.

"I had to show the bully that I wasn't going to back down," said De La Hoya, who knocked down Mayorga a second time early in the 6th before referee Jay Nady stepped in to push De La Hoya away when Mayorga fell again from another barrage of killer blows coming from all directions.

Mayorga, who slipped to 27-6-1, swung real hard but rather recklessly, often hitting nothing but air.

In contrast, De La Hoya was almost impossibly accurate, practically transforming Mayorga's face into a target range.

Not to brag but before the De La Hoya-Mayorga fight, I told two guys De La Hoya would win by knockout.

I was on board an Innova on my way from Cagayan de Oro to Davao City last Friday, May 5, in the company of Toyota hotshots Danny Isla, Raymond Rodriguez and Jing Atienza when Raymond asked, "Who you gonna pick, De La Hoya or Mayorga?"

De La Hoya.

I was having a late breakfast at the Yellow Fin Tuna Restaurant in Davao City last Saturday, May 6, in the company of Ken Angeles, Vic Caliao and another fellow whose name I couldn't remember when Ken asked, "Who you gonna pick, De La Hoya or Mayorga?"

De La Hoya.

Mick Jagger said some people just sit and watch as tears go by.

I say as years go by, good fighters can only get better.

Bunyi tackles Abdon in DHL finals

GINO BUNYI STUNNED MIKO YEE, 1 UP IN the morning quarterfinals then routed Korean Yang Jae, 5&4, in the semifinals yesterday to set up a title showdown with John Kier Abdon for the boys Class A crown in the DHL-WWW-Express national age-group championships at the Villamor Golf Club course.

Abdon, the top qualifier, was pushed to the limit in both of his matches, winning over Edsel Tan, 2 up, and Art Arboleda, 2&1, to advance to today's 36-hole finals against Bunyi.

It will be Kathleen Uy of Cebu against Chihiro Ikeda of Davao for the girls Class A plum after Uy blasted Kristine Leonen 5&4 and Ikeda routed Mendoza, 6&4.

Regine de Guzman and Marian Woo disposed of their rivals early to seal a duel for the girls Class B plum, Meen Legaspi and Andie Unson fashioned contrasting wins to barge into the girls Class C final and 8-year-old Bianca Pagdanganan earned a shot at Felicia Medalla for the girls Class D trophy.

The tourney jointly conducted by the National Golf Association of the Philippines and Junior Golf Foundation of the Philippines is sponsored by DHL-WWW-Express.

WWWEXPRESS president Joe Feliciano hits the ceremonial ball. Looking on are DHL country manager Larry Llamson, NGAP officials Danny Pizarro and Gen. Bobby Santiago and participants.

SSC rips FEU in V-League tie playoff series

Mavs rout Spurs, tie playoff series

SAN SEBASTIAN, DRAWING strength from import Jaroensri Bualae, stopped Far Eastern U., 25-21, 28-26, 25-16, to revive its hopes for a semifinal berth in the V-League presented by Shakey's at the Blue Eagle gym tonight.

Bualae, the Thai guest player of the reigning NCAA champion, came through with 20 kills and teamed up with SSC mainstay Lawrence Ann Latgay in dominating their rivals, especially in the third set to complete the sweep.

The victory was the Lady Stags' second straight, enabling them to wheel back into contention after dropping their first three games. But with a 2-3 card, the Recoletos-based spikers needed to win their last two games in the elims to gain at least a tie for the last semis berth.

Under the format, the top five teams after the single round elims will advance to the semis of this event presented by Shakey's Pizza and organized by Sports Vision.

La Salle, still playing with Philippine Christian U. at prestime, shows the way with a 4-0 slate while Adamson and PCU share second place with 3-1 cards.

FEU, which stunned erstwhile unbeaten Adamson last Sunday, dropped to 3-2.

Latgay proved to be a solid back-up to Bualae, knocking in 10 kills and winding up with 11 points for the Lady Stags.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS—JOSH Howard had 27 points and nine rebounds and Dirk Nowitzki added 21 for fourth-seeded Dallas who stormed to a 113-91 win over San Antonio that evened the quarter-final series at one game apiece.

After giving in to the patient pace of the top-seeded Spurs in Sunday's 87-85 loss in the opener, Mavericks coach Avery Johnson inserted the speedy guard Devin Harris in the lineup, replacing swingman Adrian Griffin for Tuesday's game.

"We wanted to force the tempo and play at our pace," Harris said. "In game one we played at their pace."

The move was a masterstroke as Harris helped contain Tony Parker and accelerated the offense to a new gear the Spurs could not match. Harris scored 20 points on seven-of-12 shooting.

Another beneficiary was Howard, who clearly had some extra hop in his step. He did all of his damage in the first three quarters, making seven-of-17 shots and 11-of-11 free throws.

Jerry Stackhouse also was a factor with 19 points off the bench for Dallas, which improved to 3-1 on the road in the postseason and returns home for Games Three and Four on Saturday and Monday.

The Mavericks sped to a 7-1 lead that had Spurs coach Gregg Popovich drawing a technical foul.

A jumper and two driving dunks by Howard and a 3-pointer by Stackhouse built the lead to 25-14.

In Sacramento, California, Rick Adelman was fired by the Sacramento Kings on Tuesday despite leading the club to eight consecutive appearances in the National Basketball Association playoffs as the most successful coach in franchise history.

Geoff Petrie, the Kings' president of basketball operations, gave only murky reasons for the decision, which probably was caused by clashing egos and the empty trophy case of owners Joe and Gavin Maloof, who are widely thought to be behind Adelman's departure. AP/AF

Pistons go 2-and-0 vs Cavs

DETROIT, MICHIGAN—RASHEED Wallace scored 29 points to lead a balanced attack as Detroit demoralized Cleveland with a 97-91 victory that opened a 2-0 lead in their quarter-final series.

As they did in game one, the top-seeded Pistons used a strong start, sharp shooting from the arc and a concerted defensive effort on superstar LeBron James on Tuesday to improve to 6-1 in the postseason. Game three is Saturday in Cleveland.

"Right now we've got to be a little greedy," Pistons center Ben Wallace said. "We've got to go into Cleveland looking to close this thing out. We've got them on the ropes."

Detroit maintained control despite just one very timely basket from Richard Hamilton, its top scorer in the playoffs.

Leading the way was Wallace, who had a quiet 10 points in the opener but came alive Tuesday. Looking for his offense, he made 10-of-17 shots, including 5-of-8 3-pointers. AFP

Nadal trips 'Phantom of Miami'

ROME—RAFAEL NADAL CLEARED A MAJOR obstacle in his pursuit of Guillermo Vilas' Open era record 53-match winning streak on clay.

Nadal beat 2004 champion and mentor Carlos Moya, 6-1, 2-6, 6-2, in the first round of the Rome Masters on Tuesday for his 48th successive win on dirt. He'll match Vilas if he retains the Rome title, and tie Bjorn Borg's record of 16 titles as a teenager.

Nadal acknowledged Moya presented "the worst first round" opponent possible.

"When you practice every day with one person, you know exactly (his style). And he is one of the best players in the world on clay," said 19-year-old Nadal. "When I lost the second set I saw the phantom of Miami."

Moya beat Nadal, in three sets in the first round at Key Biscayne in March.

A large Foro Italico crowd with high expectations of the clash between the two Mallorcans began to groan after Nadal won the first set and perked up when Moya forced a third.

Nadal broke for 2-0, and saved two break points at 4-2 to finally end Moya's resistance, and lead their head-to-head 3-2.

"That was a very important moment in the game," Nadal said. AP

Spain aims for World Cup glory

MADRID, SPAIN—ANOTHER TOURNAMENT, another disappointment?

Spain makes its eighth straight appearance in the World Cup with hopes of success understandably low.

A soccer giant at club level, the national team has lifted only one major trophy—the 1964 European Championship.

Spain has played in 11 tournaments overall, but has only won 19 out of 45 games.

The latest coach charged with helping Spain to live up to its potential is 67-year-old Luis Aragonés, who is unbeaten in 19 matches since replacing Inaki Sáez after the country's flop in Euro 2004.

Aragonés says he believes Spain can reach the last four, although it could face five-time champion Brazil in the quarterfinals—the team's stumbling block in two of the last three tournaments.

"It's my professional ambition and I try to transmit to the players that we have to achieve it, that we're going to achieve it. That this time the myth will be ended. That we're going to get past the quarterfinals," Aragonés said recently.

The coach said the team has to be able to survive uncomfortable moments. Every World Cup-winning team has struggled on its way to the title, he said.

"To win, you have to know how to suffer," Aragonés said. AP

Sparks seek solo lead vs Tortillos

By Jasmine W. Payo

THE FORMER WHIPPING BOYS are now feared.

From tailenders in the last two conferences, the Toyota Otis Sparks now inspire awe for their brilliant finishes and late-game rallies that have boosted them on top in the PBL Unity Cup.

And this seriously concerns coach Robert Sison when his Granny Goose Tortillos battle Toyota Otis at 4 p.m. today at the Olivarez Sports Gym in Parañaque.

"They're the comeback team," said Sison. "We just have to be ready we're expecting a physical game."

Coach Louie Alas, though, has worries of his own when his Sparks shoot for the solo lead against the resurgent Tortillos.

"We have to contain their shooters, otherwise we are in trouble," noted Alas.

Two teams who are in deeper trouble, the TeleTech Titans and the Hapee-PCU Teetnmasters, clash at 2 p.m.

With only three games left in the elimination, Titans and the Teetnmasters need a win to revive their quarterfinal bids.

The top two finishers at the end of the double round robin will earn outright semifinal berths, while the bottom placers will be eliminated.

Getting a big lift from its second stringers, Toyota Otis stunned defending champion Rain or Shine, 67-61, last Thursday.

Emerson Oreta, who averaged a mere 2.7 points in previous games, shot 12 markers including key baskets in the final stretch.

Granny Goose also got a boost from its bench, with Albie Grijaldo leading with 18 points to post an 88-73 triumph over the Mountain Jewels last Tuesday.

Taguig cagers trim Valencia

MAYOR FREDDIE TINGAS FORWARD TAGUIG cagers repulsed the visiting Valencia Golden Harvest, 76-67, Tuesday night to gain a share of the lead with idle Bacchus/Harbour Centre in the 2006 Guerrero Brandy-NBC national basketball championship at the C.P. Tinga gym in Taguig.

Ex-pro Marlon Legaspi and Paul Reguera sparked as Taguig improved its record to 4-2 in the northern division of the tourney sponsored by Panasonic, Stupicio Lines, Nature's Spring Mineral Water, Spring Cooling Oil, Regent Foods, Firefly Lightings, Molten and Prune Channel.

Legaspi and Reguera scored 15 and 12 points, respectively, to help Taguig deal Mayor Jose Galaro Jr.'s Valencia squad its fourth loss in six games.

Trailing 56-70, Valencia knocked in three straight triples to come within 65-70 with two minutes left. But Reguera and Joe Gragasian combined for six points to douse cold water on Valencia's rally.

"Our morale was down after our winning streak was snapped in our last game," said Taguig coach Danny Gaviera. "It's a good thing we were able to get back on track."

Valencia tackles Pangasinan Hundred Islands in Dagupan City tomorrow.

The scores:

TAGUIG 76—Legaspi 15, Reguera 12, Duta 11, Gragasian 11, Constantino 6, Alad 6, Castro 6, Uy 6, Pabimokio 2, Santiago 1, Magsambol 0.

Valencia 67—Cummings 12, Braga 9, Cruz 8, Berami 8, Talpados 7, Gabil 7, Clavel 7, Cesar 4, Oall 3, Novales 2, Romaguera 0.

Nathaniel Tolentino of NCR also took his share of the archery honors when he captured the secondary boys' standard and the 50m events. Also hitting gold was NCR's Emmanuel Caducang in the boys' 30 meters.

Bernas totalled 621 points to beat Loverlyn Diez of Zamboanga Peninsula (605) and Gillian Capimpin of Bicol Region (603) in the standard round. She scored 293 points to edge teammate Samantha Mercado (285) and NCR's Ronalyn Alvarez in the 50m. In the 30m, Bernas made 328 points and won over Marilyn Osias (by countback) and Capimpin (326).

The daughter of a jeepney driver, Bernas scored 104 points in her Olympic round final showdown against Central Visayas' Emily Santiago, who had 95 points.

Garduce eyes top in 2 to 3 weeks

By Jasmine W. Payo

FOR SOMEONE ENDURING MT Everest's harsh alpine weather, Romo Garduce looked quite jovial.

"The whole time, I've been fine," Garduce said in Filipino during a teleconference yesterday at the GMA Network. "I've suffered headaches and vomiting, but I haven't experienced acclimatization problems like the others I've seen. Some have been fainting."

Garduce, who's already at the base camp of the 29,028-foot mountain, claimed he's on track in his bid to be the first Filipino to conquer the world's highest peak.

"In two or three weeks, we're hoping to finish the expedition," he said. "We just keep praying for good weather and good health."

Even the news crew documenting the historic attempt in Nepal noted that nothing seems to dampen Garduce's spirits.

"He's having a difficult time, but he still manages to laugh and entertain us with his stories," said reporter Jiggy Manicad.

Garduce maintained he isn't putting too much pressure on himself. "Everest is just the start. It's not the ultimate and it isn't the end."

RP hosts fencing tilt

THE PHILIPPINES GETS ANOTHER chance to show its fencing prowess in the region when it hosts the Southeast Asian fencing championships on May 13-20 at the Philsports Arena (formerly Ultra) in Pasig City.

"After successfully defending its overall crown in the last SEA Games here, we (RP fencers) will attempt to establish our competitiveness in all age group categories over the entire Southeast Asian region," Philippine Fencing Association and Asian Fencing president Celso Dayrit said as he announced the country's hosting of the event.

Sponsored by the Philippine Sports Commission, the tourney will be the biggest ever in the 18-year history of the Southeast Asian Fencing Federation (SEAFF) because it will feature competition in cadets (17 years old and below) and juniors (20 and below). A total of 24 gold medals will be up for grabs.

This is the second time the Philippines will host this event since 1992 when the Filipinos wrestled the overall crown from Indonesia by winning nine out of 10 golds.

Admission in the event is free. Elimination rounds start at 9 a.m. while the finals are set at 4 p.m.

ALVAREZ: Good show in his first attempt.

Asian Open: Alvarez 2nd

JOHN ALVAREZ OF THE CEBU Racing Group put up a gallant stand against international rivals and wound up second in the Junior ROK division of the Asian Open Zone Karting Championship at the Shah Alam Circuit in Malaysia.

Alvarez, who's backed up by Paramount Insurance, Prestige Cars BMW Castrol and Thunder Energy Drinks, started at the back of the 11-kart grid following an incident in the pre-final heat. He passed one driver after another, even beating Malaysian champion Pei Hoong on his home circuit.

After passing nine karts, Alvarez posted the fastest time of 56.340 seconds on the 18th lap as he tried to close in on Indonesian champion Rio Haryanto, who took the checkered flag with a time of 19:12.81.

Pecante rips powerlift mark

FILIPINO ERLINA PECANTE SET A world record in squat with a lift of 200.5 kilograms in the 90-kilogram class en route to a four-gold medal performance in the Masters event of the recent Asian Powerlifting Championships in Taekwondo City, Korea. Pecante, who also holds the world record of 205kg in the 92.5kg, also bagged the gold in bench press, deadlift and overall total with lifts of 115kg, 170kg and 485kg, respectively. Nina Oca also came home with four golds in the 52kg class, lifting 112.5kg, 130kg and 302.5kg in the squat, bench press, deadlift and overall total, respectively. She established Asian and Philippine records in all events. Eddie Torres won the gold and reset his own Asian Masters mark with a squat of 280kg in the 100kg class.

'We will not be swayed!'

By Bayani San Diego Jr.

'WHAT ELSE IS NEW?'

Initially, Marissa Laguardia, chair of the Movie and Television Review and Classification Board (MTRCB), seemed unperturbed by the tempest of controversies stirred by the Hollywood movie "The Da Vinci Code."

Laguardia turned serious, however, with regard to the complaint filed by the Philippine Alliance Against Pornography Inc. against the MTRCB.

The anti-pornography group sought the help of the Commission on Human Rights, claiming that the MTRCB had "committed rampant grave abuse of authority."

In a phone interview with INQUIRER Entertainment, Laguardia explained the board's position: "The Alliance Against Pornography is free to seek the assistance of any agency it wants to approach."

When it came to "The Da Vinci Code," however, the MTRCB would remain unequivocal, said Laguardia. "Whatever decision the MTRCB arrives at with regard to the classification of 'The Da Vinci Code,' we will remain firm. We will not be swayed by any group."

INQUIRER Entertainment obtained a copy of the anti-pornography group's complaint, which alleged that the "MTRCB chief illegally signed the license/permit to import an 'anti-Christ' film [and] illegally approved its trailer."

"It's legal," Laguardia said. "I signed it so that the distributor (Columbia Pictures, Sony Pictures Releasing International's local office) can bring in a copy of the film to the country and submit it to the board for review. How can we determine whether the film is indeed 'libelous or defamatory' if we don't preview it first? We have to see the film first before we can pass judgment."

She said she's very familiar with the legal points raised by the anti-pornography group "because these are based on the MTRCB's implementing rules and regulations."

If the anti-pornography alliance could have its way, "the Philippines would be the first country in the world that would boycott the film," Laguardia pointed out.

"According to research, 'The Da Vinci Code' has received a PG-13 in the United States, G in China and PG-12 in Korea," Laguardia said. "I've been closely monitoring the issue. I've noticed that if there are groups that are strongly against the film, there are also groups that are passionately in favor of it."

Still, she remained adamant: "We cannot allow all these facts, opinions and controversies to affect our final decision."

At the time of the interview, Laguardia noted, "Columbia hasn't scheduled a screening with the MTRCB yet. Knowing the film's May 18 playdate, the distributor should submit it for review within a week."

Director aims for an Emmy with NY soap

JENNYLYN Mercado, Mark Herras, Jolina Magdangal and Marvin Agustín

By Nini Valera

DIRECTOR LOUIE IGNACIO IS AIMING FOR an Emmy for his latest soap, "I Luv New York," which was shot on location in the Big Apple.

Ignacio, 39, told the INQUIRER on Monday that Filipinos could compete in the global market for soap and telenovelas, and "I Luv New York," his comeback series to be aired over GMA 7 starting May 15, would prove this.

Using three state-of-the-art cameras that delivered 24 frames per second, Ignacio captured the depth and texture of film while working on a digital format. He described his product as a mixture of the essence of the New York lifestyle and its sophistication and the sensibility of Asian telenovelas, which have become a staple in local primetime viewing.

"So we could win an Emmy for this," he insisted. "We can do it."

While he handled the three cameras used for the shoot, and was his own cinematographer, he had to rely on a New York labor force for most of the grunt work, owing to the strict union laws that rule the city that never sleeps.

Life in New York, as everybody knows, is fast-paced, and Ignacio discovered that he could keep up with the speed of light. New Yorkers, he said, like to start early and finish early.

"I could be a New Yorker myself," he said. He told his stars that they had to work like New Yorkers and should never come late to the set. The stars also had to memorize their lines before they reported for work.

Shooting was a breeze, even if the cameras whirled for as long as 12 hours a day and he had to pay the New York crew stiff union rates for overtime work.

The stars—Jolina Magdangal, Marvin Agustín, Jennylyn Mercado and Mark Herras—worked like pros. "No one was a problem," Ignacio said.

Central Park, Times Square, the Statue of Liberty, among other destinations

But Ignacio claimed that these sites were just the background for the story of four people whose lives had intertwined in New York

"The story runs its course," he said. "I was afraid that this soap might turn into a travelogue. It did not. New York was simply the setting and the story was still the main event, and no one can say that we just went on a tour of New York and filmed the tourist attractions."

With New York still on his mind, Ignacio changed some settings for scenes that were shot here. For example, Mark, who plays the character of a poor boy in search of his mother in America, the location had originally been a squatters' area in Metro Manila

"But that would have shown us to be in such a desperate state. So I changed the location of Mark's home and brought it to the province," Ignacio related

In shooting the rural scenes, Ignacio was inspired by masters like Fernando Amorsolo who used color and light to depict an idyllic life, which he described as so Filipino

The Filipino in Ignacio also triggered a bout of homesickness for the director. Before the 22 days allotted for the shoot were up, Ignacio had wanted to go home.

"My heart is in the Philippines," he declared. "I don't want to leave it for long."

But he conceded that it was easy for him to fall in love with New York.

Ignacio also fell in love with his cast

"I've seen Joana and Marvin as a love team in the other station," he said. "In this soap, I witnessed first hand the magic in that tandem. They're still a love team despite the changes in their lives. No one could miss that special chemistry between them"

"This is a first in local television," said Wilma Galvante, GMA 7 senior vice president for entertainment.

DID YOU KNOW...

THE LOUVRE allowed "The Da Vinci Code" cast and crew to film inside the Paris museum, but the Westminster Abbey scenes were filmed elsewhere in the United Kingdom after church officials declined permission.

ENTERTAINMENT

We haven't heard the last of Paris Bennett

WHEN PARIS BENNETT WAS VOTED OUT of "American Idol," last Thursday, the singing tilt lost its youngest finalist and last remaining African-American performer.

We were especially sad to see Paris go because, to us, she was the show's gutsiest and most creative contender.

At only 17, she "dared" to compete with much older and experienced contestants, some of whom were more than 10 years her senior.

We also loved the way that Paris, the bit's "teen chameleon," would adjust her singing style and look to suit her song each week.

Now that she's out of "AI," is this the end of the road for Paris Bennett?

Not hardly. There's a huge teen music market out there, and with savvy packaging and marketing, Paris could be this year's top new teen recording sensation.

So, it's likely that we haven't heard the last of young Ms Bennett, not by a long shot.

Meanwhile, back at "AI's" feeding frenzy, Final Four Katharine McPhee, Chris Daughtry, Eliott Yamin and Taylor Hicks are making a mad, go-for-broke dash to see who will comprise the 2006

Top Three. And Katharine, Chris and Eliott have done well in their respective categories, so the same thing could happen to this year's top trio.

Any bets? Our psychic surmise is that Eliott will turn out to be the odd-man-out today, so Chris, Katharine and Taylor will slug it out in the "final-finals."

VIEWFINDER

Nestor U. Torre

On the other hand, there are fans of the show who believe that it'll be an all-male lineup for the competition's last stretch.

For our part, however, we believe that there are enough viewers out there who believe that Katharine's unique combination of talent, looks and stellar charisma is too good to pass up, and therefore deserves their enthusiastic support, despite her less-than-glowing reviews from the

HOROSCOPE

BY FRANCIS DRAKE

YOU BORN TODAY: You're creative and talented. You can excel in music, the theater and the arts. Others sometimes think you're eccentric. (You live larger than life.) People often misunderstand your flair for originality. In your 20s, you begin to reach out hungrily for life. Your curiosity is voracious! After age 50, you're attracted to the notion of domestic security. Expect a fun-loving, social year ahead.

Birthdate of: Natasha Richardson, actress; Holly Valance, pop star; Marthe Graham, choreographer.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Be very careful with money. Think twice before you shop or spend your hard-earned cash. You're definitely tempted to go overboard. Fortunately, you might go overboard earning money as well.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): It's a good thing that you're a practical, sensible sign. In discussions with partners and close friends, don't give away the farm. Don't make promises you can't keep.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20): Today fast, happy Jupiter opposes your ruler, Mercury. Tra la, tra la! It feels like everything is hunky-dory and just fine. Perhaps it is. Make sure you're not in denial about something.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22): You will enjoy working with others, especially groups, today. However, be careful about what you volunteer for or agree to. (It's very easy to bite off more than you can chew today.)

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22): Give yourself a lot of leeway when setting deadlines with bosses and authority figures today. Don't make it hard on yourself in your attempt to impress someone.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22): You might have to modify travel plans or anything to do with education, publishing and the media—simply because things are not as rosy as they seem. You're thinking big today!

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Don't overcompensate for something by giving someone too much. (You might be inclined to do that today.) Alternatively, you might want too much. (Oooh! Naughty, naughty.)

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): In your eagerness to reach an agreement with others today, you might promise them the Sun and the Moon. Don't overstretch yourself. Be realistic.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Things are a bit excessive at work today. People are going overboard about something. Don't jump on the bandwagon. Keep your wits about you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): You're wildly creative today! You're also in a wonderful party mood. Enjoy playful activities with children. Happy flirtations will please you now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): Plans to expand where you live or to explore a real estate deal look promising! Wait a day or two to see if things still appear this way.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20): It's easy to have a positive frame of mind today. You're thinking like a winner! This optimism attracts people to you.

show's judges of late. In addition, Katharine is the last remaining woman in the finals, and the show's female contestants deserve to be represented in the title's last stretch, because they have figured so strongly in the competition.

In fact, when the final 12 were first revealed, the girls generally trounced the guys on both talent and looks.

It was only during the subsequent rounds that the male finalists' individualistic performance styles started making a greater impact on viewers, generally upstaging the female bets' more predictable performances.

So, Katharine should "represent" the ladies as long as she can.

Of course, the show's viewer-voters have the last word on the matter.

If more than 45 million votes were cast last week, even more could come in now, as the Final Four's respective millions of fans support them to the very end.

Vilma's excellent performance

Last Thursday, we caught the first half of the "Maalaala Mo Kaya" drama in which Vilma Santos played the mother of a physically and mentally-challenged girl.

Doctors warned her that her child faced a grim and severe y-circum-scribed future, but Vilma's mother character refused to give up on her. True enough, her daughter was able to overcome some of her limitations, so the drama made for inspiring viewing.

Even better, Vilma once again showed why she is regarded as one of our finest actresses. Her portrayal was focused, committed, insightful, and versatile—a potential winner in this year's TV acting awards derby.

Ricky Davao, who played Vilma's husband, also turned in an excellent performance, so he deserves the most enthusiastic kudos as well. Lastly, director Olivia Lamasan's handling of the drama was admirably textured and felt.

The major fly in the show's ointment was its slow plot progression and pacing, perhaps because it's a two-part production (the second half will be telecast tonight).

If the drama had been concluded last week, it would probably have come off better. So, why the two-part format? Could Vilma's hefty talent fee have had something to do with it?

Blockbuster trailers

Trailers of potential blockbuster movies "Superman Returns" and "The Lake House" are being shown in theaters screening the big action-adventure production, "Poseidon," which opened last May 10. "The Lake House" stars Keanu Reeves and Sandra Bullock, while Brandon Routh plays the Man of Steel in "Superman Returns."

Anka does it his way musically at the Araneta Coliseum on May 15, performing hit tunes that have remained popular for decades.

Mother's Day letter from Amalia Fuentes

IT'S MOTHER'S DAY ON SUNDAY AND NOT a day goes by that I don't think of my mom. I really miss her and Mother's Day only serves to highlight that. For those of you who are fortunate enough to still have your moms around, make an effort to reach out to them instead of the other way around. Mothers shouldn't have to bend over backwards to be close to their children. They're older and they may break.

With that in mind, I am sharing with you the letter of Tita Nena (a.k.a. Amalia Fuentes), her reaction to one of my columns.

Beneath her strong words is a mother's soft heart. I love Lielz like a sister. I don't want her to have the same regrets as I do - because I left words unsaid and things undone when my mom was still around.

I'm sure she knows I mean well by printing her mom's letter. I hope that her love for her mom will prevail, even just to make Tita Nena happy on Mother's Day.

Sometimes, we don't have to give up or give in, we just have to give way.

Dearest Dolly

Ann, Thanks for your kind thoughts about me that came out in your Philippine Daily

Inquirer column. I am happy that you have come into your own as one of the more credible show biz writers in your widely read column.

But more than that, I am glad that you have acknowledged in a column item, that you actually miss your mom's sermons, "in a way that you never thought you would." Your mom was one of my dearest friends. I am sure wherever she is, she will be very happy reading this gesture of appreciation of her role in your life.

Sad to say, my daughter Lielz, who is your good friend, has not given me the same appreciation and honor. It is for this reason that I am writing to you to explain further the points I am raising about Lielz and Albert.

I have decided to break my silence once again, on this Albert and Lielz union. Yes this has been going on since time "immemorial" (to use Albert's own words in his text message to you) but it is actually them, Albert and Lielz, who have, since time "immemorial" continuously and consistently been bringing up their hard life in the US in their interviews. I am speaking again if only to let the public know the truth about this supposedly "fairy-tale romance" of Albert and Lielz.

They always mention that they went through a lot of hardships when they eloped. By continuously repeating this statement, they are actually putting me in a bad light because it gives the impression that I allowed my only daughter to go through the "hardships" that they so seem to enjoy talking about.

Lielz eloped when she was 18 and [did] not finish school. Albert was an illegal alien in the US with no permanent job.

So what did they expect when they eloped? It is true that they went through hardships. It is also probably true that they had to sleep on the floor at that time. But these things were experienced by Lielz only during the three-month period of their elopement.

This sad experience of Albert and Lielz in terms of their hardships in the early stage of their marriage should actually be a lesson to everyone not to get married young—especially if they are not financially prepared to do so. No well-meaning parent would want their children to marry young especially when they have not finished school and are ill prepared to marry.

Lielz, in the 18 years that I took care of her, has lived a comfortable life. I have provided her a good education, the comforts of a home, and whatever else a child needed for a happy life.

When she finally returned to me after three months, I accepted her and Albert into my home without questions.

They lived with me in my house in San Francisco and they did not have to pay me a single cent while they were staying with me. And up to now, I have, in no instance, denied them my help whenever they came to me for assistance. So it really pains me, that I am put in a bad light whenever they tell their story.

My warmest regards to you and all the best to you always.

Love, Tita Nena

mo. The people from Smart were floored! Was that an honest mistake or was she trying to be funny? How could it have slipped Katrina's mind that those three telecommunication companies are staunch competitors? I'm sure SMART will invite smarter guests as halli for Katrina in their next affair.

Brent's side

BRENT Javier's manager Sheryl Reyes texted me to clarify the item I wrote about Brent and SM.

According to her text: "Brent was hired in June 2005 for a three-month campaign of SM's Surplus shop. It was on trial (basis) only. Brent, Jaqi San Jose of SM and I had a written contract that it would only be for three months. Verbally, we agreed that if Brent were effective as their endorser then we would negotiate his standard endorsement rate and would do a new shoot."

"Jaqi called me, but we didn't agree on the budget so there was no new pictorial. Obviously, she was disappointed and she had to produce a picture of Brent for the billboard of Surplus. To my surprise, she used Brent's old photo for 10 months without pay—which is unfair."

"I am planning to press charges. Jaqi is liable because she's the signatory in the 'three-month trial campaign.' A picture paints a thousand words. But in Brent and SM's case, it paints hundreds and thousands of pesos! The campaign has turned into a pain!"

Maegan's two Shawns

MY INFANTICIPATING "sis" Maegan Aguilar texted me this clarification: "SisS the dad of my coming baby is Shawn (Genomal), remember? He's in India but his family is here. They might think I'm having a baby with their son! Hahaha!"

For heaven's namesake!

Kitchen reunion

AN INSIDER tipped me off that Iza Calzado and Ian Veneracion were extra chummy during the out-of-town taping of "Mobyé Kusina."

Iza's boyfriend and Ian's wife need not be alarmed though. It seemed the two were only rekindling their friendship—not playing with fire!

Et cetera

I'M EXTREMELY delighted to announce that I'll be a guest co-host again on "ETK" this Saturday, 4:30 p.m. on ABS-CBN 2. Working with Ogie Diaz, Toni Gonzaga and the wonderful staff is its own reward.

JFC sets overseas business expansion plans

Profit up 25% in Q1 despite slower industry growth

By Elizabeth L. Sanchez

JOLIBEE FOODS CORP., THE COUNTRY'S largest fast-food chain, is planning to diversify into new brands overseas, particularly India and China, for future growth.

Company chair Tony Tan Caktiong disclosed this plan yesterday as Jollibee reported a 25-percent growth in its first quarter net income to P448.7 million from year-ago's P358.3 million.

Revenue rose 16 percent to P7.6 billion from P6.5 billion, while system-wide retail sales rose 15.2 percent to P10.4 billion in the first quarter from P9 billion in the same period last year.

"The food service industry in the Philippines grew slightly in the first quarter of 2006, as consumers visited food service stores only at the same frequency as last year, which was a difficult year. Fortunately, we were able to grow our business by improving our products and service and this was made possible through the hard work of our people," Tan Caktiong said.

On the company's expansion plan, Tan Caktiong said Jollibee was exploring possible acquisitions in the fast-food segment in India and China. He said the company was looking at other types of food businesses that might include noodle fast-food chains and bakeries.

He said the Jollibee group might acquire a food chain brand in India this year.

Jollibee has been in talks with New Delhi family restaurant Nirula's for possible acquisition but negotiations were aborted after the Indian firm sold out to another company.

In China, Jollibee is expanding its existing Yonghe King brand and is open to new acquisitions.

city in the southern part of China. Currently, the fast-food king is studying possible locations in economic zone Shenzhen, communications hub Guangzhou and tourist destination Shanghai.

In the United States, the Jollibee group will open a new Red Ribbon store in the East Coast in October.

The Jollibee group reported a 10.6 percent growth in revenue last year to P29 billion from last year's P26.2 billion. Total system-wide sales—or sales of both company-owned and franchised stores—grew 12.1 percent to P39.8 billion.

In terms of group sales, Jollibee sales grew 8.1 percent; Chinese fast-food brand Chowking, 13.1 percent; pasta and pizza chain Greenwich, 5.9 percent, and China-based brand Yonghe King, 43.2 percent. The newly acquired Red Ribbon Bakeshop brand pitched in 1.6 percent to the total system wide sales.

Cost of sales increased by 10 percent to P23.3 billion in 2005 with depreciation and amortization swelling by 23.1 percent.

Other operating income fell 9 percent to P121.3 million due to forex losses incurred and lower management fees in 2005.

General and administrative expenses rose 17.2 percent to P2.9 billion. Advertising and promotion ballooned by 16 percent to P847.9 million while income tax provisions last year also increased by 20.4 percent due to higher income booked by the group and the corresponding increase in corporate taxes to 35 percent from 32 percent.

Security Bank income up 104%

SECURITY BANK CORP. POSTED A NET INCOME OF P540 million in the first quarter of the year, 104 percent more than the P265 million in the same period last year and 112 percent higher than the level in the previous quarter.

A 29-percent growth in revenue to P1.79 billion, primarily driven by trading gains, boosted the earnings performance during the quarter.

The bank leveraged its revenue performance on an operating expense base of P887.9 million in the first quarter, allowing it to keep its cost-to-income ratio at 49 percent, which was recorded in end-2005.

In the light of Security Bank's full compliance with International Accounting Standards (IAS) and its continued effort to asset quality, provisions have slowed 26.5 percent to P250.2 million from the previous year's P340.3 million.

As a result, the exceptional first quarter growth in net income translates to an annualized return on average equity of 20.5 percent, higher than the 9.8 percent recorded in the same period last year. Security Bank's share prices have risen by 59 percent to P55 per share as of May 5 from the end-2005 level of P34.50.

UnionBank Q1 profit hits P792M

UNION BANK OF THE PHILIPPINES RECORDED A NET INCOME OF P792 million in the first quarter, slightly higher than the previous year's P790 million.

This was on top of the P75 million the bank set aside as provision for loan losses.

UnionBank's revenue increased by P132 million to P2.4 billion due to rising profits from consumer finance, cash management and capital markets businesses.

Return on average equity was 17.3 percent while return on average assets was 3.0 percent during the first quarter.

The bank's total resources expanded to P105.2 billion in March 2006 from P97.4 billion in the same period last year. Total deposits grew by P3.1 billion year-on-year to P58.4 billion. The strong deposits growth was attributed to the bank's aggressive marketing strategy and innovative products and services.

Capital base rose to P8.1 billion, a 6.4-percent growth from P7.6 billion in the same period in 2005. UnionBank's credit risk-adjusted capital adequacy ratio is at 49.4 percent, four times the capitalization requirement of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas.

UnionBank was named the Most Outstanding Credit Card Company by the Consumers League of the Philippines Foundation Inc. at the recently held Consumers' Choice and Dengal ng Pilipinas Awards 2005.

JUST BETWEEN US GIRLS, THAT PUBLICLY listed I-Bank being courted for CASH acquisition by the much bigger and older Union Bank, has a little problem among its stockholders.

Word has it that Enrique Razon, founder of the port service operator ICTSI, who is one of the major stockholders of I-Bank, wanted to sell his holdings.

Joining him in the sale are stockbroker Wilson Sy (Wealth Securities) and the Lanuza group (Philreality).

Together the three groups comprise the majority in I-Bank. And this was the reason why Union Bank offered a price of P45 per share, compared to I-Bank's IPO price of only P16 per.

On the other side of table are the groups of Ben Tiu (steel business) and Ramon Sy (representing I-Bank management), who are trying to block the Union Bank offer by organizing their own takeover party.

From what I gathered, I-Bank is going through a little skirmish between two of its major stockholders.

It sounds familiar, because it's exactly the same situation in that bank that still holds some P20 billion of the funds of millions of working class members of the SSS and the GSIS members—none other than Equitable PCI Bank.

With its fragmented stock holdings, without a single stockholder having clear majority control, EPCIB is also a prime candidate for acquisition. I know personally that a number of big banks, both local and foreign, conducted internal studies on acquiring it.

EPCIB only differs from I-Bank in that, while I-Bank is getting an attractive offer, the EPCIB suitor, the SM group of mall operator Henry Sy, wants to get the bank for a song.

What explains the disparity? EPCIB is the industry leader in the OFW remittance business. It has more branches than I-Bank, both here and abroad. Why is EPCIB getting basement bargain treatment from the SM group?

I can only think of one explanation: The SM group is using political connections for its plan to take over EPCIB, through, for instance, the two "godfathers" who are close to somebody in the Palace.

Anyway, getting the raw end of the deal are NOBODY'S. They are the ignorant members of the SSS and the GSIS. What a shame!

PFIZER, the world's biggest drug company, wrote me to answer the column last May 2. Here is the letter, signed by Karen Villanueva, corporate affairs director, in full:

"For your kind information, the lawsuit against PTC and BRAD was filed after lengthy negotiations initiated by Pfizer failed to ensure that its intellectual property rights would be enforced and that the authenticity of the proposed imported product would be guaran-

ted. The approval granted, allowed sourcing Norvasc from the authorized distributors in India and Pakistan, raising serious questions about the genuineness and integrity of the product sought to be imported.

"If you are not aware yet, in the Philippines, importation and use of commercial samples of patented compound for the purpose of seeking registration thereof are not allowed. Thus, Pfizer was constrained to seek the assistance of the courts to ensure that this violation is not repeatedly done. You can refer to the case record as your reference for this subject as the same is accessible to the public.

"It might also interest you to note that PTC was able to register Norvasc in only three months, not 18 months as claimed. Thus, the accusation that Pfizer seeks to maintain monopoly of Norvasc 18 months after the expiration of the said product's patent is actually baseless.

"Despite the above and the violation having already [been] committed, Pfizer is still continuing its efforts to seek a positive resolution [of] this matter that will guarantee... patients' access to legitimate Pfizer medicines while also ensuring that the rights of patent holders, local and multinational, under Philippine laws, are upheld.

"Regarding the statement on the difference in pricing of Norvasc in the Philippines compared to other Asian countries, we believe that Pfizer products are appropriately priced and reflect the value that these bring to patients. Norvasc is in fact moderately priced in the Philippines. Its price is in the mid-range among the 20 most popular anti-hypertensive medications available in the market today.

"Prices of medicine vary from one country to another, just as prices of sugar, rice and power, for example, are quite different in the Philippines compared with other countries in Asia. Pricing can be influenced by various factors including fluctuation of currency exchange rates, taxes to import medicines, cost of manufacturing inputs, domestic inflation rate, local competitive conditions within the industry, and a public health insurance system that could subsidize the cost of medicines.

"Pfizer has also established innovative patient programs that improve access to its life-saving medicines such as Norvasc by providing substantial discounts and relevant disease management information to benefit tens of thousands of Filipino patients nationwide."

Trading of Philcomsat shares suspended

By Elizabeth L. Sanchez

THE PHILIPPINE STOCK EXCHANGE yesterday suspended the trading of Philcomsat Holdings Corp. shares pending the approval by the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) of the company's amended articles of incorporation.

PHC managed to get a new lease on life after its board on Tuesday secured the approval of the majority of the stockholders to prolong the firm's corporate life for another 50 years.

PHC was last traded on April 20 at P1 per share.

The PSE said in a circular sent to brokers that it had suspended the trading of the company's shares since the SEC had yet to approve the company's new articles of incorporation extending its corporate term.

The PSE also said it would inform the public on the developments in PHC.

PHC convened a special stockholders' meeting Tuesday at the Manila Golf and Country Club in Forbes Park.

PHC's corporate life was supposed to expire yesterday, May 10.

PHC is 80-percent owned by satellite technology pioneer Philippine Communications Satellite Corp. (Philcomsat).

Both companies are owned by Philippine Overseas Telecommunications Corp. (POTC) whose shares were sequestered by the government in 1986 on allegations that these shares were acquired using ill-gotten wealth.

RP bond index fund launched

Portion of $2-B fund pooled by 11 central banks

By Doris C. Dumlaog

THE AYALAS' BANK OF THE PHILIPPINE islands yesterday launched a pioneering P1.4-billion ABF Philippines Bond Index Fund, which is expected to double in size within the year of its public offering.

The P1.4-billion bond index fund represents the Philippines' share of the $2-billion Asian Bond Fund (ABF) pooled by 11 central banks in East Asia and the Pacific to boost local currency bond markets.

BPI was mandated to manage the Philippines' share of the second Asian Bond Fund or ABF2.

During the launch, BPI executive vice president and head of asset management Adelbert Legasto said the fund could easily double in a year's time, as investments from the public would augment the seed money from the central banks.

At the same time, he said the allocation for the Philippines could easily increase if the country's sovereign credit rating would improve in the future.

Given its current sovereign ratings, the allotment amounted to only P1.25 billion, dwarfed by the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas' $100-million contribution to the fund. The amount, however, is expected to increase to P5 billion the issue's sovereign credit ratings would be increased to investment grade.

The fund size has grown to P1.4 billion to date due to investment earnings.

Legasto said under the mechanics of the country-specific funds, the share of the country-specific allotment from ABF2 was a function of a country's sovereign credit grade.

The Philippines is currently rated two notches below investment grade by Fitch, three notches below by Standard & Poor's and four notches below by Moody's.

ABF-PBIF is an index fund tracking the iBoxx ABF Philippine Index composed of 74 securities, including the Fixed Rate Treasury Notes and sovereign zero-coupon bonds.

"ABF-PBIF is an important piece of market infrastructure that is expected not only to promote trading and liquidity of fixed income securities, but also to improve awareness on index tracker funds," BPI said in a statement.

With a minimum investment of P100,000, ABF-PBIF allows retail investors to participate in the Philippine bond market at a low cost and enhances the global asset allocation strategies of institutional investors.

Taipan's son named Metrobank prexy

METROPOLITAN BANK AND TRUST CO. yesterday named 39-year-old Arthur Ty, son of taipan George Ty, as its new president.

In a board meeting after the bank's stockholders' meeting yesterday, former Metrobank president Antonio Abacan Jr. was elected chair while taipan George Ty moved up as chair of the Metrobank Group of Companies.

Abacan served as Metrobank president for 14 years while his successor, Arthur Ty, has worked with the bank in various capacities for over 15 years.

"In today's changing business environment, Mr. Ty's youth and energy will help bring in fresh ideas and a change in mindset that can only benefit the bank," Abacan said.

SUSTAINING GROWTH, IMPROVING EFFICIENCY

San Miguel Corp. chair Eduardo Cojuangco briefs shareholders during the company's annual stockholders' meeting. Cojuangco says the conglomerate will focus on increasing efficiency and sustaining growth this year after a series of ambitious acquisitions overseas in recent years. First quarter net income hits P2.17 billion, 7 percent higher than year-ago level.

ICTSI to expand in Poland

THE POLISH PORT OPERATION of International Container Terminal Services Inc. (ICTSI) has embarked on a capacity expansion program in anticipation of increased cargo traffic in the coming months, according to the company.

In a statement, ICTSI said that its Baltic Container Terminal (BCT) in Gdynia, Poland "continues to serve new clients even as it beefs up operations and service delivery in anticipation of more vessel calls in the coming months."

BCT is an ICTSI subsidiary and is Poland's leading and most modern international trading gateway.

Its brisk business activity underscores the statement made earlier by ICTSI chair Enrique K. Razon Jr. that the company is looking to further expand overseas amid tepid business in the Philippines.

Chinatrust prepares for expansion

THE PHILIPPINE UNIT OF TAIWAN Banking giant Chinatrust Commercial Bank Corp. sees itself in a strong position to expand here by buying another bank or taking over another lender's asset portfolio.

In a briefing yesterday, Chinatrust Phils. chief finance officer Jose Nerio Salamilas said: "Because of our capital, we can actually invest in whatever business we think we should be in."

A few years ago, Chinatrust bought part of ABN-AMRO's assets when the Dutch bank shut down its Philippine operations.

Like Union Bank of the Philippines, which recently forged a deal to acquire International Exchange Bank, Chinatrust is overcapitalized, posting a capital adequacy ratio of 33 percent or more than three times the 10 percent minimum ratio required by the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas.

Chinatrust Phils. has a paid-up capital of about P2 billion, but its equity has now expanded to P4.4 billion because it has not remitted cash dividends to its parent bank thus growing its retained earnings, Salamilas noted.

While the bank is not actively looking for any specific bank to gobble up in the midst of a renewed merger and acquisition mania in the local banking system, Salamilas said China-trust was on the lookout for opportunities along the way.

Over the medium term, he said expansion through acquisition in the Philippines was an option always on the table.

Chinatrust Phils. was among the first among its peers to comply with the stiffer International Accounting Standards especially since its parent bank had to consolidate the financial results of its subsidiaries.

The IAS implementation resulted in a reduction in Chinatrust Phils' retained earnings in 2004 amounting to P200 million, but Salamilas said about P70 million of this was recovered in 2005.

SM prime to open Clark ecozone mall

SM PRIME HOLDINGS INC. IS OPENING its 24th mall at the Clark Special Economic Zone in Pampanga on Friday, as it takes advantage of the new growth corridor in the economic zone, the company said in a disclosure to the Philippine Stock Exchange.

SM City Clark is the second of the five shopping malls that SM Prime is opening this year.

The 99,000-square meter SM City Clark along M. A. Roxas Avenue is about 80 kilometers north of Manila and 60 km east of the Subic Bay Freeport, another major economic zone.

SM Prime will open three other malls this year, including the Mall of Asia which will start commercial operations on May 21. Other malls scheduled for opening are the SM Supercenter Frontera Verde in Pasig and SM City Lipa in Batangas.

SM Prime is expanding SM North Edsa with the construction of Annex 3. Earlier this year, it opened SM City Sta. Rosa in Laguna.

Amid golf courses, casinos, duty-free shops, and leisure estates, the two-level SM City Clark will be the newest shopping attraction at the Clark Ecozone, an investment and tourist destination.

Clark is only three-and-a-half hours away by plane from Hong Kong, Taiwan, Singapore, Korea and other Asian cities. And with the entry of budget airlines at the Diosdado Macapagal International Airport, tourist arrivals in Clark have increased.

PURCHASE OF VARIOUS CONSTRUCTION SUPPLIES

162 items of different construction supplies (pls see details @ www.gainscsc.gov.ph and also @ www.procurement.gov.ph)

The Local Government Unit of General Santos City through the CY 2006 Annual Budget intends to apply the sum of Two Million Five Hundred Fifty Seven Thousand Eight Hundred Fifty Three Pesos and 53/100 (P2,557,553.53) along the Approved Budget for the Contract (ABC), to purchase the items for the various construction supplies. Bids received in excess of the ABC shall be automatically rejected at Bid Opening.

The Local Government Unit of General Santos City now invites Bids from eligible Bidders for the Purchase of Various Construction Supplies. Delivery of the GOODS is required by 30 calendar days. The description of an eligible Bidder is contained in Section II of the Bidding Documents, ITB.

Bidding will be conducted through open competitive bidding procedures using non-discriminatory essential criteria as specified in the Implementing Rules and Regulations Part A (IRR-A) of Republic Act 9184 (R.A. 9184), otherwise known as the "Government Procurement Reform Act," and is restricted to Filipino citizens/sole proprietorships, organizations with at least sixty percent (60%) interest or outstanding capital stock belonging to citizens of the Philippines, to citizens or organizations of a country the laws or regulations of which grant similar rights or privileges to Filipino citizens, pursuant to Republic Act 5183 (R.A. 5183) and subject to Commonwealth Act 138 (C.A. 138). Only Bids from Bidders who pass the eligibility check will be opened. The process for the eligibility check is described in Section II of the Bidding Documents, ITB. The bidder with the Lowest Calculated Bid (LCB) shall advance to the post-qualification stage in order to finally determine responsiveness of the bid to technical and financial requirements of the project. The contract shall be awarded to the Lowest Calculated and Responsive Bidder (LCRB) who was determined as such during the post-qualification procedure.

Interested Eligible Bidders may obtain further information from the Local Government Unit of General Santos City and inspect the Bidding Documents at the address given below from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

A complete set of Bidding Documents may be purchased by Bidders that passed the eligibility check upon the presentation of the Release of Eligibility to the BAC Secretariat, at the address below and upon payment of a non-refundable local P1,000.00 to the City Treasurer's Office. The Bidding Documents shall be received personally by the bidder or his authorized representative.

The Local Government Unit of General Santos City will hold a Pre-Bid Conference open to all interested on May 16, 2006, 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon at the BAC Office, 2nd Floor, Right Wing, City Hall Building, General Santos City.

Bids and eligibility requirements must be delivered to the address below on or before 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon of May 30, 2006. All Bids must be accompanied by a bid security in the form of Cash, Certified Check, Cashier's Check, Manager's Check, bank draft or movable letter of credit equivalent to One Percent (1%) of ABC or Bank Guarantee equivalent to One and a Half Percent (1 1/2%) of ABC or Surety Bond equivalent to Two and a Half Percent (2 1/2%) of ABC or an equivalent amount in a freely convertible currency. Late bids will not be accepted.

Bid opening shall be on 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon of May 30, 2006 at the BAC Office, 2nd Floor, Right Wing, City Hall Building, General Santos City. Bids will be opened in the presence of the Bidders' representatives who wish to attend at the address below.

The Local Government Unit of General Santos City reserves the right to accept or reject any bid, to annul the bidding process, and to reject all bids at any time prior to contract award, without assuming any liability to the affected bidder or bidders.

ATI reports steady growth

ASIAN TERMINALS INC. SAID its decision to focus on its core business paid off in 2005.

"Focusing on its core business, your company continued to provide professional, quality service to its customers. We offered value-creating, innovative solutions which minimized costs and achieved world class productivity standards," ATI chair Bryan T. Smith told company shareholders.

ATI managed to sustain its growth and profitability despite increased energy costs and slower economic growth in 2005. The company earlier reported that last year's revenues grew 14.1 percent to P4.1 billion and net income for the same period increased by 78.9 percent to P466.4 million.

According to Smith, growth in 2005 was achieved by consolidating resources to revolve around competencies, pursuing rightsizing measures, effecting stringent control and restructuring of certain business units.

In view of the company's strong performance, the board of ATI approved the declaration of a cash dividend of 20 centavos per share or a total of P400 million for stockholders of record as of May 26, 2006. The cash dividend shall be paid to shareholders on June 22, 2006.

CEB to start flying to Laoag

CEBU PACIFIC IS ADDING ANOTHER route to its domestic service with its three times weekly flights between Manila and Laoag City starting June 8, 2006.

The Manila-Laoag flight departs Manila every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 11:55 a.m. arriving 12:45 p.m. and departs Laoag at 1:15 p.m. arriving in Manila at 2:05 p.m.

Danilo Mojca, CEB general manager, said the Manila-Laoag service plays an important part in the airline's vision of making travel within the country a lot more affordable and convenient for both local and foreign travelers alike. Laoag, the capital of Ilocos Norte, is the province's commercial and industrial hub. The city is known for its pottery, furniture and woven products and is a popular tourist destination in North Luzon.

The Manila-Laoag route will be the first destination to be regularly serviced by CEB in Northern Luzon. The route will be serviced by the airline's brand-new Airbus A319 aircraft with 150-seating capacity.

The airline will introduce its Manila-Laoag service with a "Seat Sale" and a one-way fare of only P488, almost 80-percent less than the current air fare to Laoag. The sale runs from May 10 to 17 only. Travel date for the promo is from June 8 to Oct. 19. After the Seat Sale, regular "Go" fares to Laoag start at P888 one-way, still more than 60-percent less than the current air fare.

Emperor Brandy strikes gold

NOTHING CAN BE MORE APPROPRIATE in describing Emperor Brandy's recent achievement than its tagline "Sa tootong tagumpay" (To true success). For the second time, Emperor Brandy received the prestigious Reader's Digest Trusted Brands, a region-wide survey conducted in seven markets -- Hong Kong, Taiwan, the Philippines, Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore and India -- where brands ranging from luxury goods to everyday necessities are ranked by consumers based on quality, value, trustworthiness, strong image and understanding of customer needs.

Formerly called Reader's Digest Super Brands since its inception seven years ago, the survey now puts brand integrity at the forefront by focusing on trust. Thus, the survey was renamed the "Reader's Digest Trusted Brands."

For Emperor Brandy, winning this award, not only once but twice in a row, clearly proves that it has gained the vote of confidence of Asia's consumers, a feat no other local brand in its category could claim. Under the alcoholic beverages category, Emperor Brandy shares the title of

Most Trusted Brands with foreign brands, Johnnie Walker and Pundador. And it's no wonder. Emperor Brandy has built its name on three important values: "sipag" (industry), "tiyaga" (patience/perseverance) and "responsibilidad" (responsibility). By consistently taking the higher ground, Emperor Brandy differentiated itself from the rest, blazing a trail which competition tried to follow. With the hallmarks of a leader, Emperor Brandy has won the respect and admiration of Asia's most discriminating consumers, and an award that truly reflects "tootong tagumpay."

"At the core of Emperor Brandy is our abiding commitment to excellence and respect for consumers. One look, one sip and it becomes clear to all that Emperor Brandy is a world-class product that is easily affordable; and our marketing campaigns have always emphasized good old-fashioned values. Emperor achieves marketing and critical success by remaining true to these noble principles," says Noli Galang, managing director for Emperor Brandy.

Agriculture production up 3.9% in Q1, helped by big corn, rice harvests, DA says

By Christine A. Gaylican

FARM OUTPUT IN THE PHILIPPINES is expected to grow by 4.5-5 percent in the first half of this year largely due to substantial rice and corn harvests, said Agriculture Secretary Domingo Pangniban.

Pangniban made the projection in a briefing yesterday after reporting that the agriculture sector, which accounts for a fifth of gross domestic product, grew 3.9 percent in the first quarter from the same quarter last year, not 5 percent as earlier reported, as the La Niña wet weather pattern boosted rice production.

Agricultural output, which also includes tropical fruit, such as coconuts and mangoes, fisheries and livestock, grew only 1.26 percent in the first half of 2005 after drought cut harvests.

Pangniban said the crops sub-sector, which recovered from a production slump, provided the biggest push during the period.

The aquaculture sub-sector, on the other hand, recorded a 14.37-percent increase in the first quarter, while the fishery sector went up by 5.38 percent.

A healthy agriculture sector increases the possibility of the economy posting a GDP growth of between 5.5 percent and 6.2 percent this year.

The expected GDP growth is also anchored on strong remittances from overseas workers, which support domestic consumption.

But some analysts said growth of up to 5 percent in farming output in the first half compared with last year would be difficult.

"In order to achieve 5 percent, they would have to grow around 6 percent in the second quarter, which is nearly double what they have in the first quarter," said Kenneth Cheng, chief analyst at Informa Global Markets in Singapore.

The first-quarter expansion was slower than an earlier projection of 4.8 percent for the period given by Economic Planning Secretary Romulo Neri.

Last week, Neri said Philippine GDP could have grown faster than 5.5 percent in the first quarter compared to the same period of last year due to a boost in rice production after the La Niña weather pattern triggered above-average rain.

The government's GDP growth target received a surprise boost on Wednesday by data showing March exports jumped 26 percent to $4.11 billion, the biggest increase since October 1999, as electronic shipments rose 25 percent.

Exports in the first quarter rose 13.8 percent, above the government's average target of 8 percent for the year. With a report from Reuters

By Abigail L. Ho

JUMPING ON THE ALTERNATIVE fuels bandwagon, oil refiner Pilipinas Shell Petroleum Corp. will start selling gasoline with a 10-percent ethanol blend today.

Shell alternative fuels project manager Michael Velasco said the sale of ethanol-blended gasoline directly from its pumps was in support of the Department of Energy's Alternative Fuels Program.

This, he said, was also part of Shell's efforts to "assist the country towards energy independence, better environment quality and creation of jobs in the rural areas."

"In order to help ensure the success of the ethanol-blended gasoline in the Philippines, we have taken on our 25 years of global expertise in formulating biofuels. We have employed the best practices used in countries like Brazil, US, Sweden and Thailand, that have contributed towards making Shell the leading retailer of biofuels in the world," he said.

With today's launch, Shell becomes the second oil firm in the country to sell ethanol blended gasoline straight from its pumps.

New player Seaoil Petroleum Corp. started selling gasoline with a 10-percent ethanol blend in selected service stations in Metro Manila as early as August last year.

Seaoil started offering its ethanol-blended gasoline in all its stations nationwide in October 2005.

In an earlier interview, Seaoil president Glenn Yu said that since the launch of its ethanol-blended gasoline, the oil firm had already sold 2.5 million liters of the bio-fuel.

Ethanol-blended gasoline currently represents 5 percent of the company's total revenue, he said.

Apart from Seaoil and now Shell, industry leader Petron Corp. had also committed to eventually blend ethanol with its gasoline products, through a memorandum of understanding with San Carlos Bio-Energy Inc., a joint venture between the National Development Corp. and Bronzcoak Philippines.

First Gen eyes German group's stake in plant

INDEPENDENT POWER PRODUCER First Gen Corp. is eyeing the 38-percent stake of German firm STEAG AG in the 210-megawatt (MW) Mindanao coal-fired power plant in Misamis Oriental, which is expected to be placed on the auction block early next year.

During yesterday's stockholders' meeting, First Gen vice chair and chief executive Peter Garrucha said he had already expressed the company's intention to acquire the STEAG stake through communications with officials here and in Germany.

"We understand from them that they would activate the sale of their 38-percent stake once the plant is completed by the end of the year. We indicated that we'll be very interested in talking to them about that," he said.

He said that over the past three years, foreign firms such as Edison Mission, Interger and El Paso had sold their Philippine assets.

This was a major opportunity area for First Gen, he said, as the IPP aimed to further beef up its business by bidding or negotiating for stakes in power generation firms held by private companies.

As with the STEAG stake in the Mindanao coal-fired power plant, which is still being constructed, he said First Gen would "continue to search and negotiate for such stakes."

STEAG had expressed its intention to let go of 38 percent out of the 89-percent stake it held in the Mindanao plant.

Discussions with interested parties, however, are not likely to take place until the power plant goes into commercial operation, which is scheduled for January next year.

Apart from STEAG, local firm State Investment Trust Inc. also owns part of the Mindanao plant.

Upon commercial operation, the plant is expected to augment Mindanao power supply, which teeters dangerously close to crisis levels.

Mindanao's system gross reserve has not been enough to meet the 11.9-percent load following frequency regulation and spinning reserve requirement since the last quarter of 2005, according to data from the National Power Corp.

From 2007 to 2008, however, power supply should stabilize with the commissioning of the Mindanao coal-fired power facility.

SHE'S BUSY AS A BEE. Fortune Aleta Ledesma is not only honorary consul of Monaco, an active member of charitable groups, a businesswoman (she's into real estate), but also a mother of three.

And yet she finds time to run a kitchen that produces fabulous baked goods. The business is actually an offshoot of a favorite family bonding activity—having meals together.

"Every weekend we have a family outing or gathering. We love to eat," she says.

"We" includes husband Rene, a businessman and honorary consul of Bulgaria, and children RJ, a television personality and executive vice president of Ledesco, the family-owned real estate company; only daughter Rina, one of Manila's Five Lovebest in 1998 and a language coordinator at Assumption College; and the youngest Rico, a student at the Berklee School of Music in Boston.

Cakes, served on a nice silver platter, became standard fare not just for family meals but also for parties and get-togethers the Ledesmas hosted. Rina used to bake the cakes with their househelp. When she became too busy, the domestic staff continued to bake using her recipes.

Now, Ledesma's moist chocolate cake, melt-in-your-mouth Brazo de Mercedes and creamy Fresh Milk Bread Pudding are beginning to be the talk of the town.

Supervisor

Though she doesn't do any baking, Ledesma personally supervises the preparation of the cakes in her fully equipped kitchen in Dasmarinas. She also is in charge of "marketing," promoting her kitchen's products to friends and acquaintances.

"I don't have a hand in baking per se, but I'm good in supervising the kitchen and keeping things the way [they should be]," Ledesma says. "I know if the cake is prepared correctly or not."

By word of mouth, her desserts, especially the chocolate cake, are slowly becoming popular. Even Lifestyle's Kitchen Rescue columnist Reggie Aspiras finds her chocolate cake irresistible and encourages her readers to try it because "it is soooooo good!"

Ledesma has three kitchen girls, Lita, Maricar and Guna, baking the cakes, the demand for which continues to rise. And when she entertains at home, dessert becomes one of the highlights of the meal, her guests expecting to sample her kitchen's baked delights.

Favorites

"We used to prepare different kinds of desserts, but it's always the chocolate cake, bread pudding and Brazo de Mercedes that the guests prefer," says Ledesma.

The moist chocolate cake is the dense and gooey type, while the velvety sweet bread pudding with rich butter and caramel sauce tastes like leche flan. Ledesma's meringue roll with egg filling, Brazo de Mercedes, has just the right sweetness and is perfect with a hot cup of coffee or tea.

The chocolate cake sells for P800, bread pudding for P650 and Brazo de Mercedes for P400.

Ledesma used to give her desserts as gifts. But now friends buy them specially during holidays. Her loyal clientele includes Agnes Huibonhuan, Babot Oreta and Mariou Pine-da.

Ledesma says, in a week, her girls bake 20-30 cakes, primarily the chocolate cake. The popularity of the chocolate cake gave the business its name, Fortune Ledesma's Chocolate Cake (8443663, 8109729 or 8939075).

"We used to call the business Tooth Fairy, but my friends kept saying Fortune Ledesma's chocolate cake so I renamed it, to their delight," she says.

Known as a civic leader and honorary consul of Monaco, Fortune Ledesma is now also gaining fame for her chocolate cakes and other desserts from the family kitchen

A blend of flavors from China to Arabia

THE PENINSULA MANILA'S Spices is showcasing until May 20 Thai food that combines the best of several Eastern cuisines, evoking the tastes of hot Szechuan Chinese, tropical Malaysian, creamy southern Indian coconut sauces and aromatic spices of Arabia

Guest chef is Sumalee Boonek, chef de cuisine of The Peninsula Bangkok's Thiptara Thai Restaurant.

"It's an exciting meal for everyone as I prepare a lot of curries, salads and dishes combining traditional Thai and Chinese favorites," says Boonek, who is doing the Thai food fair for the third year, during the press dinner at Spices (tel. 8872888 ext. 2169 and 2956).

Boonek prepared Goong Oob Woon-Sen or roasted prawns with glass noodles and ginger, cooked with oyster sauce and Chinese wine, to give the media people a taste of what the fair is offering.

Manila Pen's Thai food festival,

YUM Thua-Ploo, wing bean salad with shrimps and peanuts

"Thiptara in Spices," is also featuring culinary creations Boonek made popular at Peninsula Bangkok's authentic Thai home-style food place that overlooks the Chao Phraya River.

MUN CHUAM, taploca in soft syrup with coconut sauce

Mai Sausage Salad with Ginger, Shallots and Fresh Chili (Yum Nham), and Fish Cake with Cucumber-Peanut Sauce (Thod Man Pla).

Featured soup is Tom Yum Thai-Lay, spicy and sour seafood.

Main course includes Massaman Curry with Beef Tenderloin and Potatoes (Mas-sa-man Nua), Steamed Sea Bass with Spice and Sour Sauce (Pla-Kra-Phong Nueng Ma-naw), and Goong Oob Woon-sen. People can have either Fried Rice with Mixed Vegetables and Egg (Khao Phad Phak) or Steamed Jasmine Rice.

Desserts are Taploca in Soft Syrup with Coconut Sauce (Mun Chuam) and Sticky Rice with Sweet Mango (Khao-Niew Ma-muang).

Boonek's expertise in Thai cuisine has won her awards, including a gold medal from the Thailand Chefs Association, and taken her around the world.

At Spices, she's also recreating her signature dishes, such as Barbecued-Marinated Chicken with Lemongrass and Sweet and Sour Sauce (Gai Yang Ta-Kral), Sea Bass with Red Curry Cream Sauce (Choo Chee Pla-Ka-Phong), Grilled Prawn Salad with Pomelo (Yum Som-O), and stir-fried rice noodles with shrimps wrapped in egg nets (Phad Thai Khai Hor), creating a feast for the palate and the eyes.

Prizes

"Thiptara in Spices" is also giving diners a chance to win round-trip business-class tickets for two to Bangkok, courtesy of Thai Airways International, and a three-night stay for two in a Deluxe Suite at The Peninsula Bangkok, inclusive of daily American breakfast for two and one set dinner for two at Thiptara Thai restaurant.

Aside from the food festival, the Peninsula Academy Cooking Class will also offer basic Thai cooking lessons, "Thailand in My Plate," May 20. Boonek will introduce students to the intricacies of preparing a traditional Thai family meal. Fee is inclusive of a three-course lunch, a Peninsula Academy apron and a special gift. In search of 'turrone' and 'pastel'

FROM THE AIR, WHAT WELCOMES the visitor to Camiguin Island is the sandbar, shaped like a white crescent surrounded by an aquamarine sea. The trip there was the last of my abbreviated tour of Luzon (Coron, Palawan), Visayas (Boracay) and Mindanao. Camiguin is the smallest province of Mindanao located north of Cagayan de Oro.

A teaching stint in Cagayan de Oro ages ago introduced me to Camiguin. And the introduction was a white can of the best turrone de mani I ever tasted. At that time, my friends brought the turrone as pasalubang with the information that honey was the secret of this wonderful Camiguin specialty.

Funny how one item can be so unforgettable that it was what I looked for as soon as we landed.

Like "parachute" tourists, a group of writers had two full days to explore both the natural wonders of the province (waterfalls and pools of hot, cold and spring water) and the special cooking they do there. While turrone wasn't on the agenda, I made it part of our food tour.

The turrone maker was elusive. She wasn't there when we came and our guide couldn't tell us who the maker was. So I resigned myself to just remembering the crisp white barquillos that enveloped the chewy peanuts mixed with honey.

But lunch at the Paras Beach Resort introduced us to the manager, Wing Bollozos, who happened to belong to the family that made the turrone. And he said he would arrange for me to meet his aunt, Rita Bollozos.

Unfortunately Wing's aunt was in Cagayan de Oro for a medical checkup. But another aunt and his cousins were around.

Paz Bollozos Cavada and her husband Pat were amused at how I never forgot about the turrone years after that first bite. They teased me about buying several years worth to make up for the deprivation. They also confirmed that honey was an important ingredient, specifying Mindanao honey because changing the source, they feared, would change the taste.

Sealed bags

The white can is no longer the container. A plastic bag now seals in the turrone. Buy eight packs and they will be put in a box.

The brand name is La Salud, after Paz and Rita's mother who started the turrone business in 1920. Her picture at over 90 years of age was pointed out to me by the third-generation cousins, Maygeo Locsin and Filomena Cavada. Both said the turrone recipe was taught to Salud by her mother, Rita Morales Barrientos.

Yet, while the Bollozos are content with this small-scale cottage industry they've had for 80 years, Vjandep Bakeshop has grown from a home business to a full-scale baking operation on the island and in Cagayan de Oro city. The name combines the initials of proprietors Virgilio José and Eleanor Popera with the word "and" figuring quite prominently and the "J" silent.

Its first and still main product is the pastel de Camiguin, a small cone-shaped bread with a creamy yema filling.

Wing Bollozos told me that Salud, his grandmother, used to do the pastel. That fact is acknowledged on the calling card of the Vjandep proprietors. It was Eleanor who thought of baking and selling the pastel of her province. That happened at the time she didn't go with her husband, Virgilio, who traveled to different places as an army engineer.

Military operation

All the signs around the factory, from inspirational messages, prayers to the lyrics of "Filipino Ako" that workers sing daily point to Virgilio's military training in giving inspiration and requiring discipline. He also gave us the Vjandep timeline.

In 1990, his wife used his Christmas bonus to begin the pastel business. In 1993, Eleanor studied commercial baking after which she reformulated the pastel recipe. The result is a highly successful product that is a must buy when one visits Camiguin, as well as Cagayan de Oro city.

Virgilio, however, still prefers the bonete of his Marikina hometown, almost like the pastel but without the yema filling.

From the regular pastel, 13 varieties have been developed. These are the special and 12 flavors that include chocolate, cheese, durian, langka, pineapple, strawberry, ube, macapuno, bayabas and mango.

We sampled the baked siopao, also a hit, discovered by accident when the siopao wasn't working so the siopao buns were baked instead. There was also torta, a cake with fluted sides that had the texture of a rougher mamon.

So there's more to Camiguin Island than the lanzones everyone equates with the province. For me, it was the turrone de mani that took me years to taste again.
